U. S. Objectives All Accomplished At Havana Parley

Ministers Approve Hull's Proposals and Will Adjourn Today

ALL NATIONS TO WAR ON FIFTH COLUMNISTS

And Will Work Together To Protect Colonies, Regain Trade

By J. C. STARK

HAVANA, July 29 (AP) — American foreign ministers cemeted the solidarity of the twenty-one Republics tonight in a policy of resisting political, military or economic threats to this continent by foreign powers.

At a private plenary session which concluded their work except for a public session tomorrow for formal signatures, the ministers approved a program embracing the most far-reaching measures ever enacted at a pan-American gathering.

Sec. Hull Happy

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, weary from long hours of persuasion and argument to satisfy objections raised chiefly by Argentina, was happy over what sources close to him described as substantial success of the United States in welding the American nations into a closer-knit group to face perils lying ahead in a war-disrupted world.

Three main United States objectives were accomplished in the tedious negotiations, although the documents emerged in language couched differently from the original proposals.

These were:

Principal Objectives

1. An "Act of Havana," representing a step forward from previous mere declarations, in which the other twenty republics virtually embraced the Monroe Doctrine and gave their prior consent to its enforcement to prevent any new foreign powers from gaining control

Heat Continues To Grip East as West Gets Rain

Fatalities for 11 Days Total 680, Nine More in Washington

By The Associated Press

Strength-sapping heat plagued half of the U. S. anew yesterday (Monday) but showers cooled broad stretches of the midwestern prairies.

Forecasters reported that the nation was divided by a weather line extending diagonally across the country from upper Michigan to Arizona. Most of the states on the east side were hot and humid. The bulk of those on the west enjoyed temperate conditions.

A mass of comparatively cool air centered over the Dakotas, was expected to move slowly southeastward overnight.

The total of fatalities recorded during the last eleven days was increased to 680. Heat deaths numbered 334 and drownings 342.

Eastern States Hottest

Eastern and central states were in the high temperature column again yesterday. Baltimore suffered its eleventh consecutive day of ninety-plus readings. Thermometers also registered in the nineties in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, the District of Columbia, Florida, Tennessee, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and other states. Tops of 100 were attained in some places in Oklahoma and Kansas.

The 97.2 at Columbus, Ohio, established a peak for the summer and tied the record for the date. Similar marks formed the rule in that state. A 102.5 mark at Huntington, W. Va., yesterday smashed a four-year record. Huntington had an official 100 today.

9 Die in Washington

Nine heat deaths were counted in Washington, D. C., in a twenty-four-hour period.

For the first time in four days, New York city had a noon reading of less than 90. It was eighty-five at 1 p. m. upstate, the Saratoga races opened in the hottest weather in years.

The Bluefield, W. Va., Chamber of Commerce ascertained that the cold cash in its free drinks fund was intact. The members had promised to distribute lemonade without charge whenever the official temperature was ninety degrees. It got up to 89.95 Sunday.

Rain brought respite to Nebraska, Iowa and parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Willkie Now Has Hopes He'll Win Southern States

Believes Real Democrats Want Him; Flayed by Chas. Sawyer

By The Associated Press

COLORADO SPRINGS—Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican presidential candidate, said his hopes of carrying the south were increasing daily and that "the only Democrats who won't vote for me are those bound by regard for parties or controlled by the corrupt and nauseating party machines."

He told reporters, in response to a question, that his acceptance speech, now half written, "obviously will interpret" the party platform in part.

Sawyer Flays Willkie

CINCINNATI — Charles Sawyer, Democratic National Committeeman from Ohio, inquired of Senator Taft (R-Ohio) whether Willkie, if elected, would "undertake to secure a pardon or parole" for Earl Browder, Communist leader convicted of passport fraud.

Sawyer cited an article he said Willkie had written in the new republic March 12 in which "he became tearful over the fact that Mr. Earl Browder has been sentenced to two years in the penitentiary and had been given a $2,000 fine."

Sawyer wrote Taft because, he said, he had received a letter from the Senator soliciting a contribution for Willkie's campaign. The letter, on stationery of the Senate Appropriations Committee, indicated that Taft was soliciting "my fellow attorneys in Hamilton county" in behalf of the Ohio Republican Finance Committee.

Sawyer replied that he was sure Willkie would "cheerfully contribute to his own campaign."

"He will doubtless do better," Sawyer wrote, "than he did when he was a Democrat and contributed $150 to the national campaign. Furthermore, he has a lot of friends who have a lot of money."

Mrs. Roosevelt Smiles

NEW YORK—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote in her newspaper column that she could not "help but smile" at reading "every little while of this or that new adherent to Mr. Willkie's cause."

"I think I could have named them months ago," she declared. "They always have been adherents of some cause, but never of the New Deal."

The president's wife cited the nursery rhyme about "Tom the Piper's Son" who stole a pig and "was beat and ran off crying down the street."

Jacob Potofsky, assistant general president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (CIO), urged the 100,000 members, by letter, to support President Roose-

Roosevelt's Plan To Control Guard May Be Opposed

His Proposals Seen as Linked with New Draft Bill

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—A request from President Roosevelt for authority to order the national guard and army reserve officers to action was received today by a Congress engaged in a deep-seated controversy over the question of compulsory military training.

"The developments of modern warfare are such," Mr. Roosevelt said in a letter read to the Senate, "that only seasoned and highly trained troops can hope for success. This group of men who of necessity must be among the first to fight in the nation's defense have a right to the best preparation that time and circumstance permit."

Wheeler Seeks Compromise

In some quarters, and principally among the opponents of the pending Burke-Wadsworth compulsory training bill, there was an immediate disposition to link the two proposals. Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) said that if the conscription bill were withdrawn he would be glad to support Mr. Roosevelt's new suggestion.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich), also a critic of the draft bill, advanced the opinion that the two were part of one program, but declined to comment on the national guard suggestion until he could see more clearly what the whole involved.

Meanwhile, Senator Austin of Vermont, the assistant Republican floor-leader, said it was his understanding that if Mr. Roosevelt received the power requested, the national guard would be called out to train recruits drafted under the Burke-Wadsworth bill, if the latter were passed.

From Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, came a statement that the guard bill would probably be introduced by Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) of the Senate Military Committee, and that action would be expedited, in view of Mr. Roosevelt's request for speedy enactment.

Guard Bill First

It was suggested by some legislators, in fact, that the guard bill might be brought before the Senate ahead of the conscription measure. The leadership was obviously in no hurry to proceed with the latter.

So, although the bill had been scheduled for floor consideration this week, it began to appear that it would not be brought up before next week at the earliest. One member of the opposition, in fact, said

Two Holes-in-One Made by Sec. Hull

HAVANA, July 29 (AP)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull added two holes-in-one — on a little putting-green golf course—to his diplomatic triumphs today.

Freed of burdens of the pan-American ministers conference which kept him working day and night for ten days, Hull visited the new United States embassy in Havana and played two nine-hole rounds on the tiny course.

FDR Inspects the Outer Defenses of Washington

Says "We Will Feel a Whole Lot Safer a Year from Now"

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

NORFOLK, Va., July 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt wound up a personal inspection tour of the "outer defenses" of the national capital today with an assertion that the chances of success of another invasion would "depend entirely on when it came and who it was."

"A year from now, he remarked, "we are going to feel a whole lot safer."

He had spent a blistering hot day observing how some of the enormous expenditures for defense were being put to use in the Norfolk area and then summed it up as a "good eye demonstration of what we have been doing for national defense since last summer."

At the army's key eastern air base at Langley Field, he said in an informal chat with reporters, facilities and activities have been quadrupled in the last three years.

At the fleet operating base at Norfolk, the Norfolk navy yard and at the privately-owned Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company he added, work has jumped about fifty per cent in the past year.

"Those are conservative estimates," the president declared. "This is just the beginning. We are going to see a lot more before we get through."

From 9:45 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the afternoon, the chief executive had been on the go under a blistering hot sun which eventually persuaded him to have the top of his car put up. He saw big navy and private building ways, their timbers looking like skeleton forests, on which vessels from battleships down to destroyers were under construction.

Senate Votes To Liberalize Rail Workers Benefits

Amends Unemployment Insurance Act Passed by Congress in 1938

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP) — The Senate voted today to liberalize unemployment benefits for railroad workers by amending the 1938 Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

Senator Wagner (D.-N. Y.), sponsor of the amendments, told the Senate that the accumulation of a $130,000,000 reserve demonstrated that present payments to unemployed railroad workers were "pitifully inadequate."

Sharply disputing this, a Republican minority led by Senators Gurney of South Dakota, Austin of Vermont and Reed of Kansas urged a reduction in the three per cent pay roll tax on railroads, with a smaller increase in benefits.

After four hours of technical debate, the topheavy Democratic majority shouted down the substitute of the Republican minority and sent Wagner's measure to the House.

Wagner said the amendments would decrease the waiting period before unemployment compensation started; increase the maximum days of payment from 80 to 100 a year; and liberalize numerous other provisions.

At present unemployment payments to railroad workers for 14

Maryland Weather To Remain Warm

No Relief in Sight, State Forecast for Today Asserts

By The Associated Press

A forecast of "no relief in sight" marked this twelfth day today (Tuesday of a heat wave directly or indirectly responsible in Maryland for at least twenty-six deaths.

Temperatures in southern Maryland and in Baltimore fell somewhat from their scorching ninety-degree levels yesterday, and scattered showers brought relief to some portions of the state.

But, the weather bureau said, that was just temporary, and today's temperatures will range from ninety-five to 100 degrees. It will be the twelfth straight day of ninety-degree temperatures.

The death toll stood at fifteen drownings and eleven heat fatalities yesterday. A fifteen-year-old Martinsburg, W. Va., youth, Roy L. Light, drowned in the Potomac river near Hagerstown Sunday after saving his sister, Ethel, 13, when she called for help.

Yesterday's temperatures were not "up to standard" in the heat wave, Baltimore's maximum for the day being only ninety-four. In Annapolis, the thermometer rose to ninety-three, and rain soon brought relief.

20 Nazi Planes Downed When 80 Raid Seaport; Blitzkrieg Likely Soon

Greatest Aerial Bombardment of War Expected To Be Followed Soon by Hitler's Much Threatened Attempt To Invade British Isles; Defenders Appear Stronger

By The Associated Press

LONDON, July 30 (Tuesday) — German pre-dawn raiders struck again today through the darkness at blacked-out towns of southeastern England where massed dive bombers yesterday pounded at the key defense works of Dover, within sight of the Nazi-held coast of France.

Bombs smashed down on at least one southeastern town as other attacking planes streaked inland from the northeast and the southwest.

Adolf Hitler hurled his greatest aerial thunderbolt against Dover, the logical debarkation point for any invading force, in a daylong series of savage attacks yesterday.

For an explosive half-hour wave upon wave of dive bombers and fighters — eighty in all — blasted yesterday at the channel port, only twenty-two miles from the French coast and possible initial objective in the first major invasion attempted against England in 847 years.

British fighters, long-awaiting just such an attack, swarmed into the skies to tangle with the attackers. Official figures placed the bag of Nazi craft downed in this engagement at twenty, but unofficially the total was given as twenty-three.

Dover Attacked

The ministry of information, relaxing its restrictions against naming towns attacked, gave permission last night to name Dover as the scene of the day's major battle. Earlier the action was referred to only as over a "southeastern port."

Some of the most important military concentrations in England are at Dover, a town of 40,000, and it was at these the Germans apparently were aiming their bombs.

Towering above the city is an ancient fortress, modernized in recent years. Military men say it can withstand virtually any assault.

Protecting its fine harbor are huge, stone breakwaters through which in peacetime pass ships on the cross channel route between Dover and Calais.

France Within Sight

From the Dover cliffs the shores of German-occupied France may be seen on a bright day.

Yesterday's tremendous attack led many Britons to believe Hitler would not be long in launching his threatened frontal assault against Britain.

The day's overwhelming score in favor of Britain's defenders — was offset somewhat by the announcement of the sinking of the destroyer Wren, twenty-eighth destroyer casualty of the war, by a Nazi air bomb.

From Wales to the southeast coast the Germans blasted away at these isles with an intensified ferocity which led Britons to conclude the long-anticipated frontal assault was imminent.

Southeastern coastal areas, where the air ministry said British fighters shot down fifteen of eighty German attackers in a single, thirty-minute engagement, bore the brunt of the day's onslaught.

"German machines were falling like autumn leaves," one eyewitness reported. "Fragments of German planes, some blown to pieces by direct hits on their bomb racks, came down literally in showers.

"People who should have been in shelters stood transfixed. The fighters, darting back and forth from behind the clouds, were so high they were only tiny specks.

"The dramatic moment came when two German machines came down together, belching smoke and flame as they grew larger and finally plunged into the water, sending up tremendous twin geysers of water.

"Almost immediately another ship slid, swerved out of control and skimmed over the rooftops. It righted itself just in time.

"It turned out to be a British

China Reported To Have Turned Down Jap Peace Plans

Overtures Unconditionally Rejected, Authorities Declare

By The Associated Press

HONGKONG, July 29 — China was reported today to have turned down unconditionally Japanese peace overtures giving Japan five northern Chinese provinces outright, plus indirect hegemony over the Asiatic possessions of France and Britain.

Foreign quarters close to the Chungking government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek listed the Japanese proposals:

1. Outright cession by China to Japan of five provinces, Hopeh (which includes Tientsin and Peiping), Chahar, Shantung, Shansi and Suiyuan.

2. Recognition of Wang Ching-Wei, Japan's puppet in Nanking, as president of a Chinese republic made up of the remaining provinces plus British Burma, French Indo-China and Thailand (Siam), in which China and Japan would share economic opportunities.

(This proposal apparently was predicted on a defeat of Britain by

Britain Demands Probe of Death Of Newspaperman

Wants Full Investigation of "Suicide" of James Cox in Japan

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, July 30 — (Tuesday) — Great Britain has demanded a full investigation into the death of Melville James Cox, veteran English newspaperman who, Japanese said, committed suicide after his arrest on espionage charges, reliable sources disclosed early today.

Britain also has called for substantiation of charges of a British "espionage network" operating in Japan following Tokyo's action in rounding up several prominent British business men.

Japanese officials said Cox, a Reuters correspondent, dodged his guards and hurled himself through a second story window of the police headquarters while being questioned.

British officials were not inclined to accept a purported farewell note Cox was reported to have left.

Domei, the Japanese news agency said the note was scribbled by Cox to his wife and intended as a will. It read:

"I know what is best always, my only love. I have been well treated,

Rumania Given Until Sept. 5 To Settle Boundary

If Not Done by Then Axis Powers Will Probably Step In

By The Associated Press

BUCHAREST, July 29—Germany has given Rumania until Sept. 15 to settle her territorial differences with Hungary and Bulgaria by direct negotiation, it was reported tonight in authoritative quarters.

If there is no agreement then, it was said, the axis powers plan to step in and impose their own settlement.

Other than expressing satisfaction with the outcome of the Salzburg conference with Hitler, Premier Ion Gigurtu and Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu made no public comment. They reported direct to King Carol.

However, Juliu Maniu, leader of Rumania's powerful peasant party, opposed any further ceding of territory.

He said that the real strength of Rumania's position is Germany's desire to keep war out of the Balkans at all costs.

Rumania's Iron Guard organization also has said there must be no further loss of territory and has declared that the people would fight first.

Sources close to the government indicated that Rumania might try a compromise to solve Hungary's claims.

The plan, these sources said, is twofold:

1. Outright cession to Hungary of the cities of Satu-Mare, Oradea and Arad, and their environs;

2. Exchanges of populations in other districts.

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

Unleashing their greatest aerial assault of the war upon a single British city, eighty German dive bombers and fighter planes raided the English channel port of Dover yesterday (Monday) and fought a thundering thirty-minute battle with British defense planes.

Witnesses said "German machines were falling like autumn leaves." Britain reported seventeen Nazi planes had been shot down. In addition three bombers were destroyed as Germany also raided the south of England and the channel.

Dover is the nearest English port to German-occupied France and a logical place for debarking German troops. Reports that train service between unoccupied and occupied France had been halted, denial in Berlin, plus more intense air attacks heightened speculation that Adolf Hitler might not be long in giving the expected order for an attempt to invade England.

Nazi Airdromes Bombed

The air ministry, however, reported that seventeen Nazi airdromes in Germany, Holland, Belgium and northern France had been bombed Sunday night along with oil depots and docks in Germany. Three British planes failed to return.

The Germans placed Britain's plane losses at eleven and said the raids Sunday night did not hit military targets.

The British charged that Germany was using seaplanes marked with a medical Red Cross for "valuable reconnaissances" and for general communications work. The air ministry said two of those planes were shot down Sunday.

Britain acknowledged the loss of the 1,200-ton destroyed Wren, her twenty-eighth destroyer lost since the war began. The admiralty said the warship was hit squarely by a bomb. Casualties were not disclosed.

The German high command claimed more successes against British commerce.

Await Balkan Change

Germany and Italy waited for the Balkans to reorganize according to plans laid down by Hitler and Premier Mussolini during conferences over the weekend with Balkan representatives.

Rumania was expected to deal directly with Hungary and Bulgaria in satisfying their claims for lost territory. It was reported to Berlin that Bulgaria would take southern Dobruja, yielded to Rumania just before the World war, and Hungary would recover at least a thin part of Transylvania, huge province lost to Rumania in post-World war settlements. Bucharest heard Germany had given Rumania until Sept. 15 to decide.

A newspaperman's death in the far east developed into a diplomatic incident yesterday.

Submarine Nets To Be Laid in American Harbors If Necessary

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—A confidential navy plan to station towing vessels in every major habor for the purpose of lying submarine nets in an emergency was disclosed in backhanded fashion today by the Defense Commission.

Deep in a twenty-eight page report of recent army and navy orders, the commission listed six contracts totalling $16,499,000 for the construction of net tenders.

Inquiry at the navy department uncovered the previously restricted information that the tenders were being built to lay and operate submarine nets.

Congress has provided $20,000,000 for the nets, and supplies of cable to manufacture them have been purchased piecemeal for several weeks.

The nets which will be intertwined cables hung on floats and reaching to the ocean floor, probably will be manufactured in navy yards, the department said.

The net tenders would be stationed in every important harbor, including Honolulu, a navy spokesman said.

Neither the number to be bought nor dates of delivery were given by the defense commission. Nor was a description of the vessels available immediately, but it was understood that they probably would be similar

Germany Expects Rumania To Act Promptly in Satisfying Demands

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, July 29—Having pointed out the way, Germany and Italy apparently expected tonight that Rumania would arrange directly with Hungary and Bulgaria to hand over at least part of the territories claimed by the two countries.

This would mean, according to the well-informed Dienst Aus Deutschland news commentary, that Bulgaria would take South Dobruja and Hungary would recover at least a thin slice of western Rumania.

(Authoritative sources in Bucharest indicated Rumania was ready to make a quick, compromise offer to settle Hungary's twenty-year-old claims, giving her three border cities and their environs in the disputed Transylvania area and arranging an exchange of other populations.)

Harass British Shipping

Germany still waited for Adolf Hitler to give the "go" signal for a blitzreig attack on Britain, as German warplanes and submarines harassed vulnerable British shipping in the English channel.

"The English must see," said the newspaper Allgemeine Zeitung, "that a new order in Europe is being created through the Axis powers while they themselves wait in powerless rage to see what will be demanded of them."

Senate Votes To Liberalize Rail Workers Benefits

Amends Unemployment Insurance Act Passed by Congress in 1938

WASHINGTON, July 29, (AP) — The Senate voted today to liberalize unemployment benefits for railroad workers by amending the 1938 Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

Senator Wagner (D.-N. Y.), sponsor of the amendments, told the Senate that the accumulation of a $130,000,000 reserve demonstrated that present payments to unemployed railroad workers were "pitifully inadequate."

Sharply disputing this, a Republican minority led by Senators Gurney of South Dakota, Austin of Vermont and Reed of Kansas urged a reduction in the three per cent pay roll tax on railroads, with a smaller increase in benefits.

After four hours of technical debate, the topheavy Democratic majority shouted down the substitute of the Republican minority and sent Wagner's measure to the House.

Wagner said the amendments would decrease the waiting period before unemployment compensation started; increase the maximum days of payment from 80 to 100 a year; and liberalize numerous other provisions.

Maryland Weather To Remain Warm

No Relief in Sight, State Forecast for Today Asserts

By The Associated Press

A forecast of "no relief in sight" marked this twelfth day today (Tuesday of a heat wave directly or indirectly responsible in Maryland for at least twenty-six deaths.

Temperatures in southern Maryland and in Baltimore fell somewhat from their scorching ninety-degree levels yesterday, and scattered showers brought relief to some portions of the state.

But, the weather bureau said, that was just temporary, and today's temperatures will range from ninety-five to 100 degrees. It will be the twelfth straight day of ninety-degree temperatures.

The death toll stood at fifteen drownings and eleven heat fatalities yesterday. A fifteen-year-old Martinsburg, W. Va., youth, Roy L. Light, drowned in the Potomac river near Hagerstown Sunday after saving his sister, Ethel, 13, when she called for help.

Yesterday's temperatures were not "up to standard" in the heat wave, Baltimore's maximum for the day being only ninety-four. In Annapolis, the thermometer rose to ninety-three, and rain soon brought relief.

20 Nazi Planes Downed When 80 Raid Seaport; Blitzkrieg Likely Soon

Greatest Aerial Bombardment of War Expected To Be Followed Soon by Hitler's Much Threatened Attempt To Invade British Isles; Defenders Appear Stronger

By The Associated Press

LONDON, July 30 (Tuesday) — German pre-dawn raiders struck again today through the darkness at blacked-out towns of southeastern England where massed dive bombers yesterday pounded at the key defense works of Dover, within sight of the Nazi-held coast of France.

Bombs smashed down on at least one southeastern town as other attacking planes streaked inland from the northeast and the southwest.

Adolf Hitler hurled his greatest aerial thunderbolt against Dover, the logical debarkation point for any invading force, in a daylong series of savage attacks yesterday.

For an explosive half-hour wave upon wave of dive bombers and fighters — eighty in all — blasted yesterday at the channel port, only twenty-two miles from the French coast and possible initial objective in the first major invasion attempted against England in 847 years.

British fighters, long-awaiting just such an attack, swarmed into the skies to tangle with the attackers. Official figures placed the bag of Nazi craft downed in this engagement at twenty, but unofficially the total was given as twenty-three.

Dover Attacked

The ministry of information, relaxing its restrictions against naming towns attacked, gave permission last night to name Dover as the scene of the day's major battle. Earlier the action was referred to only as over a "southeastern port."

Some of the most important military concentrations in England are at Dover, a town of 40,000, and it was at these the Germans apparently were aiming their bombs.

Towering above the city is an ancient fortress, modernized in recent years. Military men say it can withstand virtually any assault.

Protecting its fine harbor are huge, stone breakwaters through which in peacetime pass ships on the cross channel route between Dover and Calais.

France Within Sight

From the Dover cliffs the shores of German-occupied France may be seen on a bright day.

Yesterday's tremendous attack led many Britons to believe Hitler would not be long in launching his threatened frontal assault against Britain.

The day's overwhelming score in favor of Britain's defenders— was offset somewhat by the announcement of the sinking of the destroyer Wren, twenty-eighth destroyer casualty of the war, by a Nazi air bomb.

From Wales to the southeast coast the Germans blasted away at these isles with an intensified ferocity which led Britons to conclude the long-anticipated frontal assault was imminent.

Southeastern coastal areas, where the air ministry said British fighters shot down fifteen of eighty German attackers in a single, thirty-minute engagement, bore the brunt of the day's onslaught.

"German machines were falling like autumn leaves," one eyewitness reported. "Fragments of German planes, some blown to pieces by direct hits on their bomb racks, came down literally in showers.

"People who should have been in shelters stood transfixed. The fighters, darting back and forth from behind the clouds, were so high they were only tiny specks.

"The dramatic moment came when two German machines came down together, belching smoke and flame as they grew larger and finally plunged into the water, sending up tremendous twin geysers of water.

"Almost immediately another ship slid, swerved out of control and skimmed over the rooftops. It righted itself just in time.

"It turned out to be a British

China Reported To Have Turned Down Jap Peace Plans

Overtures Unconditionally Rejected, Authorities Declare

By The Associated Press

HONGKONG, Jluy 29 — China was reported today to have turned down unconditionally Japanese peace overtures giving Japan five northern Chinese provinces outright, plus indirect hegemony over the Asiatic possessions of France and Britain.

Foreign quarters close to the Chungking government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek listed the Japanese proposals:

1. Outright cession by China to Japan of five provinces, Hopeh (which includes Tientsin and Peiping), Chahar, Shantung, Shansi and Suiyuan.

2. Recognition of Wang Ching-Wei, Japan's puppet in Nanking, as president of a Chinese republic made up of the remaining provinces plus British Burma, French Indo-China and Thailand (Siam), in which China and Japan would share economic opportunities.

Britain Demands Probe of Death Of Newspaperman

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, July 30 — (Tuesday) — Great Britain has demanded a full investigation into the death of Melville James Cox, veteran English newspaperman who, Japanese said, committed suicide after his arrest on espionage charges, reliable sources disclosed early today.

Britain also has called for substantiation of charges of a British "espionage network" operating in Japan following Tokyo's action in rounding up several prominent British business men.

Japanese officials said Cox, a Reuters correspondent, dodged his guards and hurled himself through a second story window of the police headquarters while being questioned.

British officials were not inclined to accept a purported farewell note Cox was reported to have left.

Domei, the Japanese news agency said the note was scribbled by Cox to his wife and intended as a will. It read:

"I know what is best always, my only love. I have been well treated.

Rumania Given Until Sept. 5 To Settle Boundary

If Not Done by Then Axis Powers Will Probably Step In

By The Associated Press

BUCHAREST, July 29—Germany has given Rumania until Sept. 15 to settle her territorial differences with Hungary and Bulgaria by direct negotiation, it was reported tonight in authoritative quarters.

If there is no agreement then, it was said, the axis powers plan to step in and impose their own settlement.

Other than expressing satisfaction with the outcome of the Salzburg conference with Hitler, Premier Ion Gigurtu and Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu made no public comment. They reported direct to King Carol.

However, Juliu Maniu, leader of Rumania's powerful peasant party, opposed any further ceding of territory.

He said that the real strength of Rumania's position is Germany's desire to keep war out of the Balkans at all costs.

Rumania's Iron Guard organization also has said there must be no further loss of territory and has declared that the people would fight first.

Sources close to the government indicated that Rumania might try a compromise to solve Hungary's claims.

The plan, these sources said, is twofold:

1. Outright cession to Hungary of the cities of Satu-Mare, Oradea and Arad, and their environs;

2. Exchanges of populations in other districts.

Two Holes-in-One Made by Sec. Hull

HAVANA, July 29 (AP)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull added two holes-in-one — on a little putting-green golf course—to his diplomatic triumphs today.

Freed of burdens of the pan-American ministers conference which kept him working day and night for ten days, Hull visited the new United States embassy in Havana and played two nine-hole rounds on the tiny course.

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

Unleashing their greatest aerial assault of the war upon a single British city, eighty German dive bombers and fighter planes raided the English channel port of Dover yesterday (Monday) and fought a thundering thirty-minute battle with British defense planes.

Witnesses said "German machines were falling like autumn leaves." Britain reported seventeen Nazi planes had been shot down. In addition three bombers were destroyed as Germany also raided the south of England and the channel.

Dover is the nearest English port to German-occupied France and a logical place for debarking German troops. Reports that train service between unoccupied and occupied France had been halted, denial in Berlin, plus more intense air attacks heightened speculation that Adolf Hitler might not be long in giving the expected order for an attempt to invade England.

Nazi Airdromes Bombed

The air ministry, however, reported that seventeen Nazi airdromes in Germany, Holland, Belgium and northern France had been bombed Sunday night along with oil depots and docks in Germany. Three British planes failed to return.

The Germans placed Britain's plane losses at eleven and said the raids Sunday night did not hit military targets.

The British charged that Germany was using seaplanes marked with a medical Red Cross for "valuable reconnaissances" and for general communications work. The air ministry said two of those planes were shot down Sunday.

Britain acknowledged the loss of the 1,200-ton destroyed Wren, her twenty-eighth destroyer lost since the war began. The admiralty said the warship was hit squarely by a bomb. Casualties were not disclosed.

Await Balkan Change

Germany and Italy waited for the Balkans to reorganize according to plans laid down by Hitler and Premier Mussolini during conferences over the weekend with Balkan representatives.

Rumania was expected to deal directly with Hungary and Bulgaria in satisfying their claims for lost territory. It was reported to Berlin that Bulgaria would take southern Dobruja, yielded to Rumania just before the World war, and Hungary would recover at least a thin part of Transylvania, huge province lost to Rumania in post-World war settlements. Bucharest heard Germany had given Rumania until Sept. 15 to decide.

A newspaperman's death in the far east developed into a diplomatic incident yesterday.

Submarine Nets To Be Laid in American Harbors If Necessary

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—A confidential navy plan to station towing vessels in every major habor for the purpose of lying submarine nets in an emergency was disclosed in backhanded fashion today by the Defense Commission.

Deep in a twenty-eight page report of recent army and navy orders, the commission listed six contracts totalling $16,499,000 for the construction of net tenders.

Inquiry at the navy department uncovered the previously restricted information that the tenders were being built to lay and operate submarine nets.

Congress has provided $20,000,000 for the nets, and supplies of cable to manufacture them have been purchased piecemeal for several weeks.

The nets which will be intertwined cables hung on floats and reaching to the ocean floor, probably will be manufactured in navy yards, the department said.

Neither the number to be bought nor dates of delivery were given by the defense commission. Nor was a description of the vessels available immediately, but it was understood that they probably would be similar

Germany Expects Rumania To Act Promptly in Satisfying Demands

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, July 29—Having pointed out the way, Germany and Italy apparently expected tonight that Rumania would arrange directly with Hungary and Bulgaria to hand over at least part of the territories claimed by the two countries.

This would mean, according to the well-informed Dienst Aus Deutschland news commentary, that Bulgaria would take South Dobruja and Hungary would recover at least a thin slice of western Rumania.

(Authoritative sources in Bucharest indicated Rumania was ready to make a quick, compromise offer to settle Hungary's twenty-year-old claims, giving her three border cities and their environs in the disputed Transylvania area and arranging an exchange of other populations.)

Harass British Shipping

Germany still waited for Adolf Hitler to give the "go" signal for a blitzreig attack on Britain, as German warplanes and submarines harassed vulnerable British shipping in the English channel.

"The English must see," said the newspaper Allgemeine Zeitung, "that a new order in Europe is being created through the Axis powers while they themselves wait in powerless rage to see what will be demanded of them."

Berlin, Pa., Crowd Parades against Closing Sawmill

Angry Group Stages Demonstration in Front of Judge's Home

SOMERSET, Pa., July 29 (AP)—A noisy parade of automobiles and trucks from Berlin, Pa., rolled through this peaceful community and on past the home of Judge Norman T. Boose, bearing placards and shouting passengers protesting the jurist's recent decision ordering a sawmill in the town dismantled.

"Private grudges in Berlin sustained by our judge," stated one placard. Another read "protect our sawmill—we want Potter."

Handbills tossed from the machines declared the judge's injunction directing A. J. Potter to shut down his sawmill within thirty days and remove it "satisfied three families but dissatisfied 5,000 residents" of Berlin.

The judge could not be reached tonight for comment. His wife and daughter witnessed the parade from the lawn of their home.

R. L. Groff, Berlin garage owner who lives one-half a block from the sawmill, George Wetmiller and Samuel Smith had asked the court to outlaw the mill, claiming it constituted a public nuisance. Their first court action began late in 1938 before the mill had been built. About 100 witnesses were called before Judge Boose made his decision.

The mill employes fifteen or twenty men and uses lumber from adjoining farms.

Herbert Goddard Pays Death Penalty

RAIFORD, Fla., July 29 (AP)—Praying for "the forgiveness of my God," Herbert Goddard, killer of 17-year-old Frances Ruth Dunn, died in the state prison electric chair today.

Goddard asked also for forgiveness from the parents of the Miami school girl, and, in his last minute of life, declared that he did not violate her before the slaying in a secluded beach section near Palm Beach.

The girl had been lured from home with a companion, Jean Bolton on promises of movie careers for both. Goddard's last audible words before 2,000 volts of electricity smashed into his body were "goodbye Jean."

Trying vigorously to maintain an outward calm despite his dry, trembling lips, the 29-year-old Goddard made a three-minute death chair statement in measured voice that broke twice so that spectators could not hear all the words.

Because no relative came to claim the body, superintendent Chapman planned burial in the prison cemetery.

Crump Flays Willkie For Utility Activity

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 29 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie's criticism of Edward H. Crump brought from the Memphis political leader tonight the statement that never before had a major political party "offered a man for president with so little in common with the people."

The fiery Tennessee Democratic National Committeeman, in a prepared statement, replied to Willkie's assertions that he was gratified by the type of persons pledging him support and that "there isn't a Mayor Hague, nor a Mayor Kelly, nor a Crump in the list."

"Willkie's whole life," Crump said, "has been a fight against the people—defending high electric light rates.

Walsh Has Problem Over 7 Amendments

BALTIMORE, July 29 (AP)—Into Attorney General William C. Walsh's lap today came an official dilemma born of too many laws.

The problem is this:

Seven constitutional amendments and two referenda are to be submitted to voters in November. State law says they must be published widely in the state, in newspapers in the counties and cities, once a week for three months before the election.

But another law forbids state officials to contract for such a bill if no appropriation has been made for its payment—and none has.

Governor O'Conor's office estimates it would cost between $45,000 and $65,000 to obey the first law. But they haven't the money to meet the bill, and it's illegal to promise payment.

Sears Roebuck Store Bombed after Threat

MILWAUKEE, July 29 (AP)—Twenty-four hours after Rowland H. Davis, manager, received an extortion note demanding $100,000, a small bomb exploded in a Sears Roebuck and Company store last Wednesday, police revealed today.

Damage was slight, but the note promised "a bomb 200 times larger will go off at your south and North side stores besides your own life will be in danger if you fail."

A heavy guard has been placed around all company stores in the city.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Time is so important in the battle of Britain that the lapse of ten days since Adolf Hitler's "last-chance" peace move without a wholesale onslaught on England is causing wide conjecture.

Hitler himself noted in his recent speech that bad weather had been a major consideration in forcing postponement of the Nazi west front attack from September, 1939, until the spring of 1940. There remain of this year only six or eight weeks within which Germany could expect to complete her victory without facing the same weather difficulties that held her almost inactive from September, 1939, to the spring of 1940.

Hitler's Prestige at Stake

That being the case, it is difficult to fathom Hitler's reasons for withholding his final attack on England this long. His last-chance "appeal to reason" speech of July 19 committed him so completely to a devastating attack without delay that failure to launch it soon would seriously impair his prestige.

Looking back over the available texts of the Hitler speech of July 19, it can be argued that he was expecting the preliminary air campaign against England to achieve far more decisive results than seem yet to have been attained. He scoffed at Britain's claims that she was turning out planes at an accelerating rate and thus strengthening her defense to the point of successful resistance.

"It is not necessary for us (Nazi Germany), as with the Democracies, to multiply every airplane that is built by five or by twelve, and then broadcast it to the world," he said. "Even for a hen it is not very clever to announce in a loud voice every egg she is about to lay."

Ten days later however, the British "hen" is cackling furiously of the achievements of those airplane "eggs," telling of Nazi bombers brought down and of more than 1,000 bomber raids on German targets since June 18. It is questionable whether the Nazis engaged in aerial raids on England and on British shipping are today quite as confident as Hitler was ten days ago that British boasts were so far from the truth.

Clearly, it is not shortage of material that is holding up the German blitzkrieg; nor can the Germans have any doubt about British rejection of the kind of peace Hitler offered, or any other kind short of British victory. There is an increasingly confident note in British reports of air battles, constantly rising claims of Nazi aircraft shot down and Nazi airmen captured.

Hitler has indicated full confidence of conquering England within hours or days, once he loosed his legions against her. If the fight goes on for weeks instead, and an early winter closes down on it, he is destined to lose more than his reputation as a minor prophet.

Roosevelt's Plan

he had been given assurances to that effect.

On the subject of compromises, Wheeler, Vandenberg and other opposition leaders were prepared to back a plan under which military training would be put on a voluntary basis, with one year as the period of training.

Wheeler expressed the opinion that this would draw in an adequate number of volunteers. Many young men would offer themselves if assured of adequate training, Wheeler said, but they would not volunteer for the army at present with the prospect of spending "three years peeling potatoes." Vandenberg said simply that the one-year voluntary plan would be introduced as a substitute for the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

Limits Training Period

With his letter, Mr. Roosevelt sent a draft of the legislation to carry his request into affect. This would limit the period of training given the national guard and reserve officers to one year, and restrict the scene of such service to the western hemisphere except for possessions of the United States elsewhere and the Philippine islands.

Mr. Roosevelt recalled that some weeks ago he asked authority to call the national guard to active service if an emergency should arise when Congress was not in session.

"That proposal is no longer sufficient," he added, "as I am now convinced that the security of the nation demands that this component of our army be brought to the highest possible state of training efficiency more rapidly than its present program permits."

He spoke of the personal sacrifices which members of the guard would have to make. This, he added, had deterred him from making the request sooner, but now he could not "with clear conscience" postpone it longer.

Wants Early Training

"If this authority is granted," he said, "I propose to order the guard to duty in successive increments to permit the effective use of training facilities and equipment immediately avilable. Each increment will, of course, be released when it attains the desired state of efficiency."

Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the House Military Committee said:

"In view of the foreign situation," wisdom and prudence backs the president in his request for authority to call out the national guard for use in defense of the western hemisphere.

Informed sources said the army high command was deeply concerned by the possibility that the Dutch East Indies might be seized by an unfriendly power and United States imports of tin, rubber and other essential commodities thereby stopped or curtailed.

John L. Lewis, CIO leader, who had already made known his opposition to the conscription bill, followed up with a letter to the Senate and House Military Committees elaborating his views.

Declaring that conscription would endanger basic civil liberties, he added that "a sufficient number of voluntary elistments could be secured if the pay for enlisted men were increased and the minimum period of enlistment reduced."

Pilchard's Widow Tells How Negro Killed Husband

Testifies Arthur Collick Shot Him in Stomach with Shotgun

TOWSON, Md., July 29 (AP)—Mrs. Annie Pilchard, 55, today described the slaying of her husband, Harvey, 61, at their Stockton, Md., home last Feb. 11, and from the witness stand identified Arthur Collick, 28-year-old negro, as one of the slayers.

She also identified Collick as the man who criminally assaulted her, and shot her in the back.

Charles Manuel, 18-year-old negro jointly indicted with Collick on a charge of murder, was granted a separate trial on motion of his attorneys.

Mrs. Pilchard, testifying at a trial by court, said her husband was shot in the stomach by a shotgun after he had answered a knock on the back door. He staggered back into the dining room, and collapsed.

Collick, she said, entered the room and demanded "where's your money?"

Then, her testimony continued, he attacked her, forced her upstairs, and shot her with a revolver as she was taking her pocketbook from a bureau drawer.

Mrs. Pilchard said she fainted. Later she heard footsteps on the stairs, and hid on the back porch roof. The men went away, she testified, but later returned, and this time she hid on the roof of the house, where she was found the next morning. Dr. John L. Riley of Snow Hill testified that Pilchard died a few minutes after the shooting. Five other witnesses today included George B. Cropper, civil engineer, Herman W. Burbage, undertaker; Frank Atkinson, deputy sheriff, and Bennett T. Parks, county constable.

fighter and the crowd returned the gunner's wave with thunderous cheers."

Eight bombers and seven fighters out of fifty Stukas and thirty escorting Messerschmitts were bagged in this battle. Another German bomber was downed over the south of England in a before-dawn attack.

Slashing back at the Germans, the air ministry reported seventeen Nazi airdromes in Germany, the Netherlands Belgium and Northern France and docks in Germany were bombed during the night. Three British craft failed to return.

In its communique dealing with yesterday's air warfare, the German high command reported eleven British planes shot down to Germany's two.

244 Nazi Planes Destroyed

Today's bag of German planes brought Britain's official count of invading craft downed by home defenses to 318, and to 244 since the first mass German raid June 18.

The admiralty's account of the Wren's loss said the 1,200-ton destroyer was hit squarely by a bomb. It did not disclose the loss of life.

The Wren, built in 1918, carried a normal complement of 134 officers and men.

Britain has been turning out destroyer replacements at a pace described as more than replacing the losses. She started the war with 179 destroyers.

Fighting in Mediterranean

Britain traded aerial blows with Italy in the Mediterranean.

The Italian bombed the island fortress of Malta in five week-end attacks which the British said caused one civilian casualty and slight damage. Four raiders were downed.

Total Italian losses in the Malta attacks were announced officially at twenty-five planes to Britain's one.

A British communique from Nairobi, Kenya, told of heavy casualties inflicted on Italians by British bombers at Moyale, captured recently by Premier Mussolini's troops after a long siege.

In the western desert, along the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, a British patrol was attacked by low-flying Italian planes far behind the enemy lines, resulting in "some casualties," a Cairo communique said.

Norris Wants Congress To Adjourn for Best Interests of Country

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) said today that "Congress has become the hysteria center of the country" and urged adjournment on the ground that further sessions would be "dangerous" but others held that prospective defense measures made chances remote for leaving the sizzling capital.

"There is not a member of Congress who is in shape to pass upon legislation," Norris said in an interview, referring to a heat wave which has seen the temperature in the upper nineties for more than a week.

"Congress has not done a damn thing since before the Republican convention and it's in no mood to do things right now. All this talking and bickering only tends to produce hysteria."

With Democratic majorities in both house and Senate, Norris said that the leaders should force a test vote on the adjournment question.

Senator McNary (R-Ore), Republican leader and vice presidential nominee, was unchanged in his demand that Congress stay on the job even during the fall election campaign.

Los Angeles, July 29 (AP)—Verlin Spencer, 37, former south Pasadena Junior High school principal, pleaded guilty today to the murder of five associates and attempted murder of a sixth, throwing himself on the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced later.

Spencer went to confer May 6 with George C. Bush, 64, South Pasadena Superintendent of Schools; John E. Aiman, 58, High School Principal, and Will R. Two British Ships Arrive with 1,323 Passengers from England

NEW YORK, July 29, (AP)—The armed British liners Brittanic and Cameronia steamed into New York harbor today—their secretive arrival contrasting sharply with the gala reception accorded the new U. S. Liner America which followed in their wake.

The English ships brought 1,323 passengers, including 372 children—one of the largest contingents to arrive aboard belligerent vessels since the war began. The Britannic carried 778, nearly all British, and the Cameronia brought 545, including many refugees.

Passengers on both reported meeting large convoys bound for England—ships loaded with food and war supplies. Britannic passengers said they met forty-nine ships in convoy the second day out and sixty-five, many of them oil-laden tankers, the next day.

Aboard th Britannic were Lord Primrose, 11-year-old son of the Earl of Roseberry; George Vivian Smith, 6, and his year-old sister, who were greeted at the pier by J. P. Morgan, the financier, who earlier had given a haven to five other young English children— including Davina and Simon Bowes-Lyon, 10 and 8, niece and nephew of Queen Elizabeth.

Other passengers were Playwright Noel Coward, on a mission to British Ambassadow Lord Lothian for the Ministry of Information.

Also aboard were fourteen pieces of luggage, including hat boxes, trunks and a golf bag, some bearing the crest of the Prince of Wales, others marked with the name of the Duke of Windsor. Consigned in care of the line, the destination of the luggage was not disclosed. But the duke and duchess of Windsor, now in Lisbon, will sail for America Thursday on the American export liner, Excalibur en route to the duke's post as governor and commander-in-chief of the Bahamas.

Mrs. Ruth Dillon Freed Of Murder Charge

LEWISBURG, W. Va., July 29 (AP)—Mrs. Ruth Dillon was acquitted by a Greenbrier county circuit court jury today of the murder of her husband, Harold Dillon, last October 14 at White Sulphur Springs.

Mrs. Dillon, appearing as the principal witness at the one-day trial, showed no trace of the bullet wound she suffered at the time of her husband's death and which kept her confined many months at a Clifton Forge, Va., hospital while physicians feared for her recovery.

Prosecutor Nickell Kramer quoted the witness, whose husband was a special officer for the Chesapeake and Ohio railway ,as saying Dillon was shot as the couple struggled for possession of his gun.

"He began shooting at me after we had returned home early that morning from a party," Mrs. Dillon was quoted. There were no other witnesses, Kramer said.

The jury deliberated thirty minutes.

U. S. Still Opposed To Closing Burma Road

WASHINGTON, July 29, (AP)—The United States let it be known today that it was as opposed as ever to Britain's closing of the Burma road, major supply route for the Chinese army.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, made it plain also that any negotiations toward relinquishing this government's special rights in China would be with the legitimate and recognized government of China — not with Japan or a puppet state set up by Tokyo.

The question whether the United States was backing down in the Far East was raised in Welles's press conference by a newsman.

Berlin, Pa., Crowd Parades against Closing Sawmill

Angry Group Stages Demonstration in Front of Judge's Home

SOMERSET, Pa., July 29 (AP)—A noisy parade of automobiles and trucks from Berlin, Pa., rolled through this peaceful community and on past the home of Judge Norman T. Boose, bearing placards and shouting passengers protesting the jurist's recent decision ordering a sawmill in the town dismantled.

"Private grudges in Berlin sustained by our judge," stated one placard. Another read "protect our sawmill—we want Potter."

Handbills tossed from the machines declared the judge's injunction directing A. J. Potter to shut down his sawmill within thirty days and remove it "satisfied three families but dissatisfied 5,000 residents" of Berlin.

The judge could not be reached tonight for comment. His wife and daughter witnessed the parade from the lawn of their home.

R. L. Groff, Berlin garage owner who lives one-half a block from the sawmill, George Wetmiller and Samuel Smith had asked the court to outlaw the mill, claiming it constituted a public nuisance. Their first court action began late in 1938 before the mill had been built. About 100 witnesses were called before Judge Boose made his decision.

The mill employes fifteen or twenty men and uses lumber from adjoining farms.

Herbert Goddard Pays Death Penalty

RAIFORD, Fla., July 29 (AP)—Praying for "the forgiveness of my God," Herbert Goddard, killer of 17-year-old Frances Ruth Dunn, died in the state prison electric chair today.

Goddard asked also for forgiveness from the parents of the Miami school girl, and, in his last minute of life, declared that he did not violate her before the slaying in a secluded beach section near Palm Beach.

The girl had been lured from home with a companion, Jean Bolton on promises of movie careers for both. Goddard's last audible words before 2,000 volts of electricity smashed into his body were "goodbye Jean."

Trying vigorously to maintain an outward calm despite his dry, trembling lips, the 29-year-old Goddard made a three-minute death chair statement in measured voice that broke twice so that spectators could not hear all the words.

Because no relative came to claim the body, superintendent Chapman planned burial in the prison cemetery.

Crump Flays Willkie For Utility Activity

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 29 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie's criticism of Edward H. Crump brought from the Memphis political leader tonight the statement that never before had a major political party "offered a man for president with so little in common with the people."

The fiery Tennessee Democratic National Committeeman, in a prepared statement, replied to Willkie's assertions that he was gratified by the type of persons pledging him support and that "there isn't a Mayor Hague, nor a Mayor Kelly, nor a Crump in the list."

"Willkie's whole life," Crump said, "has been a fight against the people—defending high electric light rates.

Walsh Has Problem Over 7 Amendments

BALTIMORE, July 29 (AP)—Into Attorney General William C. Walsh's lap today came an official dilemma born of too many laws.

The problem is this:

Seven constitutional amendments and two referenda are to be submitted to voters in November. State law says they must be published widely in the state, in newspapers in the counties and cities, once a week for three months before the election.

But another law forbids state officials to contract for such a bill if no appropriation has been made for its payment—and none has.

Governor O'Conor's office estimates it would cost between $45,000 and $65,000 to obey the first law. But they haven't the money to meet the bill, and it's illegal to promise payment.

Sears Roebuck Store Bombed after Threat

MILWAUKEE, July 29 (AP)—Twenty-four hours after Rowland H. Davis, manager, received an extortion note demanding $100,000, a small bomb exploded in a Sears Roebuck and Company store last Wednesday, police revealed today.

Damage was slight, but the note promised "a bomb 200 times larger will go off at your south and North side stores besides your own life will be in danger if you fail."

A heavy guard has been placed around all company stores in the city.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Time is so important in the battle of Britain that the lapse of ten days since Adolf Hitler's "last-chance" peace move without a wholesale onslaught on England is causing wide conjecture.

Hitler himself noted in his recent speech that bad weather had been a major consideration in forcing postponement of the Nazi west front attack from September, 1939, until the spring of 1940. There remain of this year only six or eight weeks within which Germany could expect to complete her victory without facing the same weather difficulties that held her almost inactive from September, 1939, to the spring of 1940.

Hitler's Prestige at Stake

That being the case, it is difficult to fathom Hitler's reasons for withholding his final attack on England this long. His last-chance "appeal to reason" speech of July 19 committed him so completely to a devastating attack without delay that failure to launch it soon would seriously impair his prestige.

Looking back over the available texts of the Hitler speech of July 19, it can be argued that he was expecting the preliminary air campaign against England to achieve far more decisive results than seem yet to have been attained. He scoffed at Britain's claims that she was turning out planes at an accelerating rate and thus strengthening her defense to the point of successful resistance.

"It is not necessary for us (Nazi Germany), as with the Democracies, to multiply every airplane that is built by five or by twelve, and then broadcast it to the world," he said. "Even for a hen it is not very clever to announce in a loud voice every egg she is about to lay."

Ten days later however, the British "hen" is cackling furiously of the achievements of those airplane "eggs," telling of Nazi bombers brought down and of more than 1,000 bomber raids on German targets since June 18. It is questionable whether the Nazis engaged in aerial raids on England and on British shipping are today quite as confident as Hitler was ten days ago that British boasts were so far from the truth.

Clearly, it is not shortage of material that is holding up the German blitzkrieg; nor can the Germans have any doubt about British rejection of the kind of peace Hitler offered, or any other kind short of British victory. There is an increasingly confident note in British reports of air battles, constantly rising claims of Nazi aircraft shot down and Nazi airmen captured.

Hitler has indicated full confidence of conquering England within hours or days, once he loosed his legions against her. If the fight goes on for weeks instead, and an early winter closes down on it, he is destined to lose more than his reputation as a minor prophet.

Among the firms receiving contracts for the net tenders was: Marietta Manufacturing Company, Point Pleasant, W. Va., $2,040,000.

Roosevelt's Plan

he had been given assurances to that effect.

On the subject of compromises, Wheeler, Vandenberg and other opposition leaders were prepared to back a plan under which military training would be put on a voluntary basis, with one year as the period of training.

Wheeler expressed the opinion that this would draw in an adequate number of volunteers. Many young men would offer themselves if assured of adequate training, Wheeler said, but they would not volunteer for the army at present with the prospect of spending "three years peeling potatoes." Vandenberg said simply that the one-year voluntary plan would be introduced as a substitute for the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

Limits Training Period

With his letter, Mr. Roosevelt sent a draft of the legislation to carry his request into affect. This would limit the period of training given the national guard and reserve officers to one year, and restrict the scene of such service to the western hemisphere except for possessions of the United States elsewhere and the Philippine islands.

Mr. Roosevelt recalled that some weeks ago he asked authority to call the national guard to active service if an emergency should arise when Congress was not in session.

"That proposal is no longer sufficient," he added, "as I am now convinced that the security of the nation demands that this component of our army be brought to the highest possible state of training efficiency more rapidly than its present program permits."

He spoke of the personal sacrifices which members of the guard would have to make. This, he added, had deterred him from making the request sooner, but now he could not "with clear conscience" postpone it longer.

Wants Early Training

"If this authority is granted," he said, "I propose to order the guard to duty in successive increments to permit the effective use of training facilities and equipment immediately avilable. Each increment will, of course, be released when it attains the desired state of efficiency."

Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the House Military Committee said:

"In view of the foreign situation," wisdom and prudence backs the president in his request for authority to call out the national guard for use in defense of the western hemisphere.

Informed sources said the army high command was deeply concerned by the possibility that the Dutch East Indies might be seized by an unfriendly power and United States imports of tin, rubber and other essential commodities thereby stopped or curtailed.

John L. Lewis, CIO leader, who had already made known his opposition to the conscription bill, followed up with a letter to the Senate and House Military Committees elaborating his views.

Declaring that conscription would endanger basic civil liberties, he added that "a sufficient number of voluntary elistments could be secured if the pay for enlisted men were increased and the minimum period of enlistment reduced."

Pilchard's Widow Tells How Negro Killed Husband

Testifies Arthur Collick Shot Him in Stomach with Shotgun

TOWSON, Md., July 29 (AP)—Mrs. Annie Pilchard, 55, today described the slaying of her husband, Harvey, 61, at their Stockton, Md., home last Feb. 11, and from the witness stand identified Arthur Collick, 28-year-old negro, as one of the slayers.

She also identified Collick as the man who criminally assaulted her, and shot her in the back.

Charles Manuel, 18-year-old negro jointly indicted with Collick on a charge of murder, was granted a separate trial on motion of his attorneys.

Mrs. Pilchard, testifying at a trial by court, said her husband was shot in the stomach by a shotgun after he had answered a knock on the back door. He staggered back into the dining room, and collapsed.

Collick, she said, entered the room and demanded "where's your money?"

Then, her testimony continued, he attacked her, forced her upstairs, and shot her with a revolver as she was taking her pocketbook from a bureau drawer.

Mrs. Pilchard said she fainted. Later she heard footsteps on the stairs, and hid on the back porch roof. The men went away, she testified, but later returned, and this time she hid on the roof of the house, where she was found the next morning. Dr. John L. Riley of Snow Hill testified that Pilchard died a few minutes after the shooting. Five other witnesses today included George B. Cropper, civil engineer, Herman W. Burbage, undertaker; Frank Atkinson, deputy sheriff, and Bennett T. Parks, county constable.

Eight bombers and seven fighters out of fifty Stukas and thirty escorting Messerschmitts were bagged in this battle. Another German bomber was downed over the south of England in a before-dawn attack.

Slashing back at the Germans, the air ministry reported seventeen Nazi airdromes in Germany, the Netherlands Belgium and Northern France and docks in Germany were bombed during the night. Three British craft failed to return.

In its communique dealing with yesterday's air warfare, the German high command reported eleven British planes shot down to Germany's two.

244 Nazi Planes Destroyed

Today's bag of German planes brought Britain's official count of invading craft downed by home defenses to 318, and to 244 since the first mass German raid June 18.

The admiralty's account of the Wren's loss said the 1,200-ton destroyer was hit squarely by a bomb. It did not disclose the loss of life.

The Wren, built in 1918, carried a normal complement of 134 officers and men.

Britain has been turning out destroyer replacements at a pace described as more than replacing the losses. She started the war with 179 destroyers.

Fighting in Mediterranean

Britain traded aerial blows with Italy in the Mediterranean.

The Italian bombed the island fortress of Malta in five week-end attacks which the British said caused one civilian casualty and slight damage. Four raiders were downed.

Total Italian losses in the Malta attacks were announced officially at twenty-five planes to Britain's one.

A British communique from Nairobi, Kenya, told of heavy casualties inflicted on Italians by British bombers at Moyale, captured recently by Premier Mussolini's troops after a long siege.

In the western desert, along the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, a British patrol was attacked by low-flying Italian planes far behind the enemy lines, resulting in "some casualties," a Cairo communique said.

Norris Wants Congress To Adjourn for Best Interests of Country

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) said today that "Congress has become the hysteria center of the country" and urged adjournment on the ground that further sessions would be "dangerous" but others held that prospective defense measures made chances remote for leaving the sizzling capital.

"There is not a member of Congress who is in shape to pass upon legislation," Norris said in an interview, referring to a heat wave which has seen the temperature in the upper nineties for more than a week.

"Congress has not done a damn thing since before the Republican convention and it's in no mood to do things right now. All this talking and bickering only tends to produce hysteria."

With Democratic majorities in both house and Senate, Norris said that the leaders should force a test vote on the adjournment question.

Spencer Pleads Guilty To Five Murders

Los Angeles, July 29 (AP)—Verlin Spencer, 37, former south Pasadena Junior High school principal, pleaded guilty today to the murder of five associates and attempted murder of a sixth, throwing himself on the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced later.

Spencer went to confer May 6 with George C. Bush, 64, South Pasadena Superintendent of Schools; John E. Alman, 58, High School Principal, and Will R. Speer, 53, school business manager, and killed them all. As he left the office he shot Bush's secretary, Dorothea Talbert, through the spine and she may be paralyzed for life.

Returning to his school, Spencer killed Verner V. Vanderlip, 41, and fatally wounded Ruth Sturgeon, 56, both teachers.

Two British Ships Arrive with 1,323 Passengers from England

NEW YORK, July 29. (AP)—The armed British liners Brittanic and Cameronia steamed into New York harbor today—their secretive arrival contrasting sharply with the gala reception accorded the new U. S. Liner America which followed in their wake.

The English ships brought 1,323 passengers, including 372 children—one of the largest contingents to arrive aboard belligerent vessels since the war began. The Britannic carried 778, nearly all British, and the Cameronia brought 545, including many refugees.

Passengers on both reported meeting large convoys bound for England—ships loaded with food and war supplies. Britannic passengers said they met forty-nine ships in convoy the second day out and sixty-five, many of them oil-laden tankers, the next day.

Aboard th Britannic were Lord Primrose, 11-year-old son of the Earl of Roseberry; George Vivian Smith, 6, and his year-old sister, who were greeted at the pier by J. P. Morgan, the financier, who earlier had given a haven to five other young English children— including Davina and Simon Bowes-Lyon, 10 and 8, niece and nephew of Queen Elizabeth.

Other passengers were Playwright Noel Coward, on a mission to British Ambassadow Lord Lothian for the Ministry of Information.

Also aboard were fourteen pieces of luggage, including hat boxes, trunks and a golf bag, some bearing the crest of the Prince of Wales, others marked with the name of the Duke of Windsor. Consigned in care of the line, the destination of the luggage was not disclosed. But the duke and duchess of Windsor, now in Lisbon, will sail for America Thursday on the American export liner, Excalibur en route to the duke's post as governor and commander-in-chief of the Bahamas.

Have an Eye to Pork, Not Form In Breeding Hogs, Expert Advises

This little piggie is laughing — maybe because he figures in the future he won't have to worry about his appearance. Instead, says Professor L. M. Winters, hogs will be judged by the pork they produce.

AP Feature Service

ST. PAUL — The old order in animal breeding, with emphasis on pure-bred types, is passing. So says L. M. Winters, professor of animal husbandry at the University of Minnesota.

The idea that appearance is a good indicator of performance does not stand the test of breeding studies now in progress at the university and other research institutions, he says, explaining:

"Speed and thrift of gains, size of litters, pounds of wool and lamb per ewe as well as pounds of butterfat produced are far more accurate tests of real efficiency."

He predicts completely new breeds developed from crosses of present breeds.

"Experiments at Minnesota," he says, "show clearly that cross-bred hogs are more efficient producers of pork than pure-breds."

Future livestock improvements, he predicts, will be directed at increasing efficiency rather than improving appearance of farm animals. Proved sires, cow and sow testing, inbreeding, cross-breeding and artificial insemination will be used widely, he says, to develop more profitable livestock.

Mandel Accused of Plot Against France

RABAT, Morocco, July 29 (AP)—A French military tribunal opened proceedings Saturday at Meknes against Georges Mandel, minister of interiar in the wartime Reynaud cabinet, on charges of plotting against security of the state.

Mandel is one of the former French leaders who came to Africa before the Armistice was signed.

Mandel is in Meknes.

He has been mentioned frequently, along with Former Premier Edouard Daladier and others, in demands for investigation of responsibility "for plunging France into the war" and for the direction of the disastrous campaign.

The present proceedings, however, were not linked in the government announcement with action which may be taken against the others.

Admiral Taylor Dead

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—Rear Admiral David Watson Taylor, naval constructor who had a prominent part in the creation of the modern American navy, died Sunday at the age of seventy-six after a long illness.

Admiral Taylor was the navy's chief constructor during the World war and the new testing basin at nearby Carderock, Md., bears his name.

Navy To Use New Type of Bombers

SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 29 (AP)—The navy announced today it had asked Consolidated Aircraft Corp to rush construction of a squadron of thirty-ton, four-engined long-range patrol bombers.

The huge airboats would be the first squadron of their design to be delivered to the navy and if found satisfactory would supplant the PBY twin-motored bombers in service with the fleet patrol wings.

The new bombers have a cruising range of 5000 miles, carrying a crew of nine and several tons of bombs. With a speed in excess of 200 miles an hour, they are rated the fastest aircraft of their type in the world.

German Broadcasts To Be Resumed

NEW YORK, July 29 (AP) — The Mutual Broadcasting system announced here that its broadcasts from Berlin, stopped by German authorities a week ago, would be resumed tonight.

They were banned after the Don Lee network, MBS coast outlet of thirty-one stations, cut off the air a speech by Adolf Hitler on July 19.

MBS said German broadcasting authorities agreed to allow MBS to continue its Berlin broadcasts after it had been explained to them that affiliated network stations at their own discretion could accept or reject any program offered.

New Dive Bomber Tested in New York

NEW YORK, July 29 (AP) — The first of eighty speedy new Grumman fighters, built to compete with Europe's fastest, was given a test at nearby Roosevelt field and crated immediately for shipment to Great Britain.

Field observers said the plane, heavily camouflaged, cruised at well over 330 miles an hour and dived at more than 500.

Have an Eye to Pork, Not Form In Breeding Hogs, Expert Advises

This little piggie is laughing — maybe because he figures in the future he won't have to worry about his appearance. Instead, says Professor L. M. Winters, hogs will be judged by the pork they produce.

AP Feature Service

ST. PAUL — The old order in animal breeding, with emphasis on pure-bred types, is passing. So says L. M. Winters, professor of animal husbandry at the University of Minnesota.

The idea that appearance is a good indicator of performance does not stand the test of breeding studies now in progress at the university and other research institutions, he says, explaining:

"Speed and thrift of gains, size of litters, pounds of wool and lamb per ewe as well as pounds of butterfat produced are far more accurate tests of real efficiency."

He predicts completely new breeds developed from crosses of present breeds.

"Experiments at Minnesota," he says, "show clearly that cross-bred hogs are more efficient producers of pork than pure-breds."

Future livestock improvements, he predicts, will be directed at increasing efficiency rather than improving appearance of farm animals. Proved sires, cow and sow testing, inbreeding, cross-breeding and artificial insemination will be used widely, he says, to develop more profitable livestock.

Entirely Too Much Authority Is Going to the President

MEMBERS of Congress should by this time awaken to the realization that they have been entirely too free and easy in handing over unrestricted authority to the chief executive.

The information has been brought to light by C. B. Allen, Washington representative of the New York Herald Tribune, that President Roosevelt now has the power, and may exercise it at its discretion, to commandeer and turn over into government operation, "any manufacturing plant or facility" in the United States which he should happen to consider essential to the national defense.

This authority, which has never before been granted to a chief executive excepting in time of war, was revealed by a close perusal of the so-called navy speed-up act, which was rushed through Congress just before it recessed for the Republican national convention in Philadelphia, and which was signed by President Roosevelt June 28.

Washington observers state that many of the members of the Senate and the House who approved the new law in the feverish rush to enact rearmament legislation were not aware of the unprecedented power over American industry placed in the presidential hands by this hitherto unnoticed clause in the "speed-up" measure:

> "The secretary of the navy is further authorized, under the general direction of the president, whenever he deems any existing manufacturing plant or facility necessary for the national defense, and whenever he is unable to arrive at an agreement with the owner of any such plant or facility for its use or operation, to take over and operate such plant or facility either by government personnel or by contract with private firms: provided further, that the secretary of the navy is authorized to fix the compensation to the owner of such plant or facility; and provided further, that the secretary of the navy shall report to the Congress, every three months, the contracts entered into under the provisions of this subsection."

The bill, ostensibly designed to speed naval shipbuilding by a variety of means, is replete with references to the "national emergency declared by the president on September 3, 1939" so that it is clear that the administration's power to seize and operate private plants is not contingent upon a declaration of war, as has been the custom in the past before such drastic steps were authorized.

This particular section of the law, in effect, gives Mr. Roosevelt a control over all industries contributing to the nation's defense program approaching if not matching that exercised in the totalitarian regimes of the old world.

It has been rumored that, in addition to this power already given to the navy, the army is seeking legislation which will give the secretary of war, "under general direction of the president," similarly sweeping power over industry during the current peace-time preparedness program. This, and the fact that the secretary of the navy already holds such authority, has led to speculation whether the administration plans to invoke the new law in the case of Henry Ford and any other allegedly "recalcitrant" manufacturers with whom the government is said to be "unable to arrive at an agreement."

Such hasty legislation as this serves to stress the drift toward authoritarianism under way in the federal administration. It should move members of Congress to more diligent scrutiny of measures forced upon it and certainly to give consideration to the advisability of amending the clause noted, which doubtless would not have been approved had its import been fully understood.

Peculiar Accidents and Motor Responsibility

TRAFFIC AUTHORITIES of Pittsburgh asked the National Safety Council to settle this one:

> "A wheel came off a truck, rolled down a hill, struck a telephone pole, glanced off and struck a child with fatal results. Is this a motor vehicle traffic accident?"

How would you classify it, Mr. and Mrs. Reader?

And what about this one, from Providence, R. I.?

> "Shall we classify as motor vehicle deaths those suffered by persons riding in motor vehicles and drowned when engulfed by a tidal wave during the hurricane?"

Into which statistical pigeon hole would you consign the records of these deaths?

In the Pittsburgh case the council ruled it was a motor vehicle traffic accident, since the sequence of events which resulted fatally for the child started with the movement in traffic of a motor vehicle.

In the Providence case the ruling was, "non-motor vehicle—death due to cataclysm," with the observation that the people in the tidal wave would have drowned regardless of motor vehicles or traffic.

"Some persons might ask," says W. G. Johnson, chief statistician of the National Safety Council, "Why quibble about what kind of an accident it is? The victim is dead and nothing else matters."

But there is a lot else that matters. The meticulous sorting of traffic accidents by the thousands is showing traffic authorities why accidents occur and how they can be prevented.

A Good Citizen and Faithful Worker Is Called Beyond

THE NEWSPAPER FRATERNITY is joined in the sorrow that obtains generally in the community over the passing of J. B. Tardy Jenkins, good and popular citizen. That is not only because he was for so many years connected with it but also especially because his work therein was unusually capable and loyal and his associations therein always pleasant.

Tardy, as he was generally known, was for many years auditor of the old Cumberland Daily News, of which this newspaper is successor, and he served it with an exemplary loyalty through all of its vicissitudes in a most competent and helpful manner. That loyal service at times involved considerable self-sacrifice but that was never allowed to interfere with his high sense of duty. It has always been a matter of deep regret that a change enforced by economic necessities in the local newspaper field deprived it of Mr. Jenkins's services during a period that was hoped would be temporary.

Fraternal circles, in which he was an active and useful member, have also lost a good spirit in the passing of this man. All in all, Jenkins was a splendid citizen and Cumberland people generally grieve over his death and extend sincere condolences to the bereaved family.

The Real Objection To Mr. Roosevelt

OBJECTION to the third term for a president is driving many Democrats away from the New Deal party but behind that stands another reason for that departure and while a number of the departees do not like to expatiate upon it, nevertheless it is even more moving. Henry L. Mencken bluntly sets it forth in the Baltimore Sunday Sun.

"The real objection to Roosevelt," Mencken writes, "is not that he is running for a third term, but that he is an infernally bad president, and a generally suspicious and dangerous character. The more piously he howls against the bad faith of the dictators, the more the fact is rubbed in that his own solemn word is worth precisely nothing. Even his stooges at Chicago belched sadly when he told them that he didn't want a third term, and was taking it only as a matter of conscience and public duty. In the course of nearly forty years' attendance upon political orgies I have heard many whoppers, but that one was surely the champion of them all."

Europe May Be Nearer Famine than Expected

A GREAT DEAL is being said these days about America's keeping itself in readiness to alleviate starvation in Europe. That time may come sooner than is commonly realized. It was not until several years of the last war had passed that famine became critical in Europe. But Europe approached that war with abundance. Some countries entered this war on a basis of food rationing. Therefore any reduction in European crops will be most serious.

In addition, instruments of destruction have more power than twenty-five years ago, notably the airplane. It is not announced how much food is being sunk on the high seas and how much more air raids are blowing up at terminal storage points. But it must be a vast quantity and every unit that is destroyed puts Europe that much nearer the critical stage.

It is now known how abundant or how well protected the British food supply is. But even Britain may soon be up against serious shortage and the Western Hemisphere will remain the only source of abundance in the world.

Japan, we read, plans to continue vigorously the prosecution of its war against the Chinese. Isn't there an old Confuscius saying about, "He who rides a tiger fears to dismount"?

One thing the natives of those little Baltic countries now taken over by Russia won't need to worry about is how their elections in the future are going to turn out.

Johnson Declares He Never Urged Baruch for Post

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C. July 29—Some papers have dropped this column. More have picked it up. That is their right. Nobody ever heard a squawk or a gloat out of me.

Hugh Johnson

The Chicago Times dropped it during the Democratic convention when, frankly, it got too hot over the blatant hypocrisy and trickery of the third term "draft." Too hot in language, but not in truth and substance, according to all I heard from newspaper colleagues and what the gentler and New Dealier Raymond Clapper said in the same paper. I have no kick at all.

But publisher Thomason, published a full page editorial "explaining" that it was his public "responsibility" under the "canons of journalism" as a "consideration of public welfare" because (Oh just and righteous God!) I have "a personal grudge against President Roosevelt" and also "we do not believe General Johnson is an accurate, a fair and truthful reporter and commentator."

* * *

Accuracy Sought

No daily comment can be always completely accurate. I try to be, and my column has just received the annual Headliners Club Award and medal for something like that quality. No factual accuracy here has ever been shown to me that I have not promptly corrected. Fairness is a matter of opinion. But this column has been commended by so ardent a New Dealer as Harold Ickes for at least trying to be fair. Let's skip all that, but when one newspaperman attacks the only worthwhile stock-in-trade of another—his honesty—decency requires that he specify the charged dishonesty.

The only specification here is that my "personal grudge" is because I had "urged several times" that my friend Bernard Baruch be appointed to the job in "national defense activties" that Knudsen and Stettinius got and that, when they were appointed, I began a "personal vendetta upon jealousy and injured pride." This is absolutely the only specification in this assault on my integrity—which is my living.

Insisted on Knudsen

Consistent readers of this column know that it began and continued to urge Knudsen for this work over a year before it was suggested by anybody else, and nearly two years before his appointment. They also know that the entire Advisory Defense Commission was enthusiastically hailed and continuously supported in this space. I have never suggested Mr. Baruch for that job. He couldn't and wouldn't undertake it. What I have urged for almost three years was that his repeated warning advice be followed on Germany's alarmingly growing military strength, on the woeful weakness of England and France and on our own shameless defenselessness. If that had been done the whole world might have been spared this agony and our own country this awful threat and expense.

That is the published and public record and, on every word of it is clear that the only factual basis of this vicious assault on my professional honor is the reverse of truth. So what does that make out of Thomason and his paper in the precise disqualification he charges to this column—inaccuracy, unfairness and untruth?

* * *

Not a New Dealer

The Chicago Times is extremely pro-New Deal. Fair enough. Until the recent enticement of Frank Knox all other Chicago papers were extremely anti. It was remarkably good business. It has taken this erstwhile newspaper wreck past Colonel Knox's long established News in city circulation. But Mr. Thomason is no New Dealer. He's a very shrewd and successful businessman. Some of his paper's principal backers and directors are anti-Roosevelt economic royalists. Taking on my column was a bid for middle class readers. Dropping it was a New Deal mandate of which I was warned.

The janizariat hatchet men were all out there at the time. Their acknowledged columnist spokesman is the Times's leading feature. Some time ago he wrote a similar piece and was frank enough to say that the New Dealers had decided to "do a job on me." Because it was as exclusively compounded of provable libels as this one, it was as easy to demolish. I mention it because it is based on exactly the same error about Baruch and my "injured pride." That stupid blunder reveals of Mr. Thomason "his master's voice."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"THEY FOLD THEIR TENTS LIKS THE ARABS AND SILENTLY STEAL AWAY!"

Democrats Are Sorry Now That They Abolished Their Old Two-Thirds Rule

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

As gloomy a face as there is on Capitol Hill, with congress getting back to work after the Chicago convention, is the visage of Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri. Not only did the Democrats do what he didn't want them to do in session in the Windy City, but he was mainly responsible for their ability to do what they did do.

Senator Clark

Senator Clark, as is well known, is a strenuous anti-New Dealer. He also was an anti-third termer. Furthermore, he was opposed to the vice presidential nomination of Henry A. Wallace, on the ground that he's a Republican.

Now for a glance backward into history.

Until quite recent years there prevailed at Democratic national conventions what was known as the "two-thirds rule." That is to say, two-thirds of the delegates had to vote for presidential and vice presidential aspirants in order to nominate them.

Senator Clark didn't like this rule. He said it was undemocratic—that a simple majority ought to be sufficient to choose candidates, as at Republican conventions. Some folk contended that his real reason for objecting to the rule was different. Their account was that he hated it because his father, the late Speaker Champ Clark, although he could get a majority, couldn't get two-thirds, and therefore was prevented from getting the presidential nomination at the Baltimore convention which choose Woodrow Wilson. Incidentally, Franklin D. Roosevelt was prominent in the delegates' ultimate surge Wilsonward. Some people argue that that fact had something to do with the anti-Roosevelt attitude of the late speaker's son during F. D.'s presidential incumbency.

Two-Thirds Rule Abolished

Be all that as it may, the present Senator Clark fought hard for the abolition of the Democrats' two-third rule.

The southern states didn't want it abolished. They hadn't enough delegates to give them a convention majority, but they did have enough to prevent any aspirant, to whom they might object, from getting two-thirds. Thus they exercised at least a veto power. Several southerners predicted to Bennett Champ that, if he got that rule abolished, sooner or later he'd be sorry—that he'd want to head off some nomination or another and that a plain majority rule would make it impossible for him to do it.

But Bennett didn't believe them. He continued his fight and he won it. The two-thirds rule was abolished, and Bennett Champ had more than any other one man to do with accomplishing it.

Now, if the two-thirds rule had prevailed in Chicago, President Roosevelt couldn't have been nominated, and neither could Henry A. Wallace have been nominated. Even New Dealers admit as much. Plenty of anti-New Deal southern senators and representatives are pointing out to Bennett Champ today, "We told you so." And Bennett Champ hasn't any very apt rejoinder.

Speaker Bankhead's Case

Speaker William B. Bankhead looks pretty glum, too.

However, he hasn't anything to reproach himself for. To be sure, he was beaten for the vice presidential nomination and undoubtedly it hurt his feelings, but he didn't have anything prominently to do with abolishing the two-thirds rule.

If the rule still had prevailed, Wallace, as previously remarked, certainly couldn't have been nominated. It doesn't necessarily follow that, in that event, Bankhead would have won, but probably he would; it's a fair guess that the delegates would have switched to him, as the second strongest candidate.

What particularly must pain Bankhead is the circumstance that, although reputedly more of an old line than a New Deal Democrat, he's been very faithful to New Deal legislation throughout the Roosevelt administration—only to be chucked into the discard by it, as a vice presidential aspirant.

It Looks Like Waste Motion

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

The United States seems definitely headed toward conscription. The Senate Military Affairs committee has approved an amended Burke-Wadsworth bill. Mr. Roosevelt has indicated his support of the program, and majority congressional sentiment apparently favors some form of universal service.

It very well may be some plan of compulsory service may be necessary to supplement the flow of volunteers in building up our armed forces, although this newspaper is not satisfied with the evidence thus far submitted. It is inclined to believe that the country will produce volunteers as rapidly as they can be trained and equipped.

Assuming, however, that this is not the case, a number of questions press for answers:

What sort of an army are we aiming at? How big do we want it to be? How rapidly do we propose raising it? Are we trying to do an emergency job, or are we building a permanent structure?

Unless we visualize the necessity of marshalling the complete manpower of the nation at once, and unless we are able to absorb, train and equip this manpower promptly, this newspaper cannot see the necessity of anything so elaborate as the pending bill apparently contemplates.

The measure calls for the registration of all males between the ages of 18 and 64 years, a total of some 42,000,000 persons. Of these, 1,500,000 between the ages of 21 and 30 would be conscripted during the first year and go into training for a one-year period.

Later, the active service draft would be extended to the 45-year age level, and "home service" occupations assigned to those in the 18-21 and 45-64 age groups.

It is difficult for this newspaper to visualize the necessity of inducting the whole male population—save those exempt for cause—into the military service. We believe in general military training for our young men. Therefore, we would be inclined to favor a law requiring every able-bodied youth to enter the military service for a definite period upon attaining the age of 18 years, for example, or 21 years. Maintained as a permanent custom, this would give us a definite period upon attaining the age of 18 years, for example, or 21 years. Maintained as a permanent custom, his would give us a definite and approximately equalized group to train every year. And in the course of a few years, it would give us a mightly reserve. In time, every man in the country would have had some military training.

As an emergency defense measure, it may be necessary to go a little faster than this; to take men of more advanced age. But this newspaper can conceive of no valid excuse for registering the man power of the nation today. It looks like a lot of waste motion.

Another Casualty

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

For historical reasons only it is pertinent to comment on the administration's reciprocal tariff policy and on the objection raised in the Philadelphia platform that agreements with other nations negotiated under it had been made "without congressional approval." Regardless of the policy and of the Republican plank events have moved on. The European nations with which we have such pacts are tither subjugated or at war, and our pacts with Latin-America no longer fit.

Point is that reciprocal trade agreements are impossible either in a warring or a Nazi-Fascist world, since they operate only when trade is unfettered. This is because, when we negotiate a trade treaty with any other country, all others share in its benefits except those on what may be called a government black list. The Nazi-Fascist program works the other way around, any trade concession to a country being exclusive. Should we negotiate further treaties we would be giving the dictators tariff concessions; but when they negotiated treaties, they would be barring us from similar concessions—a jug-handled set-up.

Although the administration has not given up its policy in so many words, it is preparing to do so in fact. The proposals for buying Latin-American goods with block-dollars, or buying surplus coffee for distribution in this country under relief stamp plans or otherwise, are admissions that the reciprocal trade policy does not square with present world conditions. Even Canada, with which we have such a treaty, has found it necessary to get away from it.

Quotable Quotes

By Corinne Updegraff Wells in the Rotarian Magazine

Most of us are exceedingly generous with the millions we do not possess, and we smugly offer our lack of money as excuse for our lack of generosity. Yet generosity has surprisingly little to do with money. Many of the most precious gifts bear no price tags. Ingenuity and imagination often provide gifts which make presents purchased with money seem cheap and tawdry by comparison.

Strong Voice an Important Asset For an Officer

By EDWIN C. HILL

Grammar, like everything else, feels the stress of war and rumors of war, as the imperative mood advances and the subjunctive recedes.

Edwin C. Hill

In this country, we have to work up to it. Muleskinners and traffic policemen have been about our only true masters of the voice of command. At Plattsburg, voice training for officers-to-be is an important detail of the daily drill. Business and professional men, accustomed to restrained and tentative office diction, are taught to utter ship-lash commands with the solid impact and carrying power of stern authority. I happen to know one of these men in training—an executive of a large corporation, and one of the most quietly effective executives I ever knew. His inter-office memos are apt to begin, "May I suggest that under the circumstances it would be well to take into consideration—." Now he has to practice barking "r-r-r-r-ight for-war-r-r-d four-r-rs ri-ght, and put plenty of the old mule-kick in it. Of course it has to be. We're going all the way through without water feed on this preparedness trail. But such modes and moods of speech light up the contrasts between war and peace.

* * *

Our Own Voices

Perhaps, some day, like Elijah, we shall hear the "still, small voice" which is not in the great, strong wind, or the earthquake or the fire, but until then we have to set over us our own voices of command, and they can never be merely persuasive. That is, if we want to save our skins.

It is quite possible that some of the office men at Plattsburg, especially those who happen to have the right kind of voices, will find themselves living up to their unsuspected and newly unleashed vocal powers. In such manner we sometimes add cubits to our stature. We have brought forward in our file, from far down the old back road of memory, the story of the choir singer who measured up to his voice.

* * *

Just a Straggler

In a little Indiana town, they formed a company of the state National Guard, when the Spanish-American war was coming on. When the boys drilled on Saturday, up and down the dusty Main street, the choir singer, who will be identified merely as John, was just a straggler in the ranks. John, getting on past thirty, was also just a straggler in the town. He was good-looking and affable, but he had bungled his jobs in the bank, in the post-office and as bookkeeper in the flour mill. He just strung along. But how he could sing! The church was packed to hear John sing Stainer's Te Deum, or a solo part in the anthem. But that just about let John out. Everybody said he never would amount to much.

Barked Into Captaincy

One night when the boys were milling around the bandstand, trying to get untracked, the captain, a shoe-clerk, with a high, squeaky voice, injured his vocal cords and somehow, in the general melee of the next few weeks John got a crack at giving commands. Ed Seeley said he heard him clear down to Barstow's ice house, four miles away, John had a high baritone voice, and he was an instinctive actor. He put a wallop in his commands like a chunk of slag in a glove, and he built up suspense by a long roll of r's before the socko command at the end. In a few weeks he barked himself into the captaincy. His shoulders had been drooping a bit, but now they were straight. He looked everybody straight in the eye, even the old town mortgage shark who had fired him because he caught him playing a mandolin.

* * *

John a Hero

The boys went off to a training camp in Florida, with everybody cheering and John singing commands like the angel Gabriel as they entrained. Florida was as far as they got, but word came back to the town that its company had won some kind of special recognition as the smartest outfit in those parts. John was a hero when they came back and people began to remember that they had always said this boy would make good. John certainly looked and behaved like success. He was nobody's yes-man.

The town banker sent him down to Chicago to help put over a big paying deal. He got a job as a salesman for a company selling contractor's equipment. With a few sharp, incisive sentences, he could get a man on the dotted line. Plenty of girls wanted to marry him. He picked the prettiest and moved to Chicago and when I last heard of him had a many-turreted house on Lake Shore Drive. He lived up to his voice.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Entirely Too Much Authority Is Going to the President

MEMBERS of Congress should by this time awaken to the realization that they have been entirely too free and easy in handing over unrestricted authority to the chief executive.

The information has been brought to light by C. B. Allen, Washington representative of the New York Herald Tribune, that President Roosevelt now has the power, and may exercise it at its discretion, to commandeer and turn over into government operation, "any manufacturing plant or facility" in the United States which he should happen to consider essential to the national defense.

This authority, which has never before been granted to a chief executive excepting in time of war, was revealed by a close perusal of the so-called navy speed-up act, which was rushed through Congress just before it recessed for the Republican national convention in Philadelphia, and which was signed by President Roosevelt June 28.

Washington observers state that many of the members of the Senate and the House who approved the new law in the feverish rush to enact rearmament legislation were not aware of the unprecedented power over American industry placed in the presidential hands by this hitherto unnoticed clause in the "speed-up" measure:

> "The secretary of the navy is further authorized, under the general direction of the president, whenever he deems any existing manufacturing plant or facility necessary for the national defense, and whenever he is unable to arrive at an agreement with the owner of any such plant or facility for its use or operation, to take over and operate such plant or facility either by government personnel or by contract with private firms: provided further, that the secretary of the navy is authorized to fix the compensation to the owner of such plant or facility; and provided further, that the secretary of the navy shall report to the Congress, every three months, the contracts entered into under the provisions of this subsection."

The bill, ostensibly designed to speed naval shipbuilding by a variety of means, is replete with references to the "national emergency declared by the president on September 3, 1939" so that it is clear that the administration's power to seize and operate private plants is not contingent upon a declaration of war, as has been the custom in the past before such drastic steps were authorized.

This particular section of the law, in effect, gives Mr. Roosevelt a control over all industries contributing to the nation's defense program approaching if not matching that exercised in the totalitarian regimes of the old world.

It has been rumored that, in addition to this power already given to the navy, the army is seeking legislation which will give the secretary of war, "under general direction of the president," similarly sweeping power over industry during the current peace-time preparedness program. This, and the fact that the secretary of the navy already holds such authority, has led to speculation whether the administration plans to invoke the new law in the case of Henry Ford and any other allegedly "recalcitrant" manufacturers with whom the government is said to be "unable to arrive at an agreement."

Such hasty legislation as this serves to stress the drift toward authoritarianism under way in the federal administration. It should move members of Congress to more diligent scrutiny of measures forced upon it and certainly to give consideration to the advisability of amending the clause noted, which doubtless would not have been approved had its import been fully understood.

Peculiar Accidents and Motor Responsibility

TRAFFIC AUTHORITIES of Pittsburgh asked the National Safety Council to settle this one:

> "A wheel came off a truck, rolled down a hill, struck a telephone pole, glanced off and struck a child with fatal results. Is this a motor vehicle traffic accident?"

How would you classify it, Mr. and Mrs. Reader?

And what about this one, from Providence, R. I.?

> "Shall we classify as motor vehicle deaths those suffered by persons riding in motor vehicles and drowned when engulfed by a tidal wave during the hurricane?"

Into which statistical pigeon hole would you consign the records of these deaths?

In the Pittsburgh case the council ruled it was a motor vehicle traffic accident, since the sequence of events which resulted fatally for the child started with the movement in traffic of a motor vehicle.

In the Providence case the ruling was, "non-motor vehicle—death due to cataclysm," with the observation that the people in the tidal wave would have drowned regardless of motor vehicles or traffic.

"Some persons might ask," says W. G. Johnson, chief statistician of the National Safety Council, "Why quibble about what kind of an accident it is? The victim is dead and nothing else matters."

But there is a lot else that matters. The meticulous sorting of traffic accidents by the thousands is showing traffic authorities why accidents occur and how they can be prevented.

A Good Citizen and Faithful Worker Is Called Beyond

THE NEWSPAPER FRATERNITY is joined in the sorrow that obtains generally in the community over the passing of J. B. Tardy Jenkins, good and popular citizen. That is not only because he was for so many years connected with it but also especially because his work therein was unusually capable and loyal and his associations therein always pleasant.

Tardy, as he was generally known, was for many years auditor of the old Cumberland Daily News, of which this newspaper is successor, and he served it with an exemplary loyalty through all of its vicissitudes in a most competent and helpful manner. That loyal service at times involved considerable self-secrifice but that was never allowed to interfere with his high sense of duty. It has always been a matter of deep regret that a change enforced by economic necessities in the local newspaper field deprived it of Mr. Jenkins's services during a period that was hoped would be temporary.

Fraternal circles, in which he was an active and useful member, have also lost a good spirit in the passing of this man. All in all, Jenkins was a splendid citizen and Cumberland people generally grieve over his death and extend sincere condolences to the bereaved family.

The Real Objection To Mr. Roosevelt

OBJECTION to the third term for a president is driving many Democrats away from the New Deal party but behind that stands another reason for that departure and while a number of the departees do not like to expatiate upon it, nevertheless it is even more moving. Henry L. Mencken bluntly sets it forth in the Baltimore Sunday Sun.

"The real objection to Roosevelt," Mencken writes, "is not that he is running for a third term, but that he is an infernally bad president, and a generally suspicious and dangerous character. The more piously he howls against the bad faith of the dictators, the more the fact is rubbed in that his own solemn word is worth precisely nothing. Even his stooges at Chicago belched sadly when he told them that he didn't want a third term, and was taking it only as a matter of conscience and public duty. In the course of nearly forty years' attendance upon political orgies I have heard many whoppers, but that one was surely the champion of them all."

Europe May Be Nearer Famine than Expected

A GREAT DEAL is being said these days about America's keeping itself in readiness to alleviate starvation in Europe. That time may come sooner than is commonly realized. It was not until several years of the last war had passed that famine became critical in Europe. But Europe approached that war with abundance. Some countries entered this war on a basis of food rationing. Therefore any reduction in European crops will be most serious.

In addition, instruments of destruction have more power than twenty-five years ago, notably the airplane. It is not announced how much food is being sunk on the high seas and how much more air raids are blowing up at terminal storage points. But it must be a vast quantity and every unit that is destroyed puts Europe that much nearer the critical stage.

It is now known how abundant or how well protected the British food supply is. But even Britain may soon be up against serious shortage and the Western Hemisphere will remain the only source of abundance in the world.

Japan, we read, plans to continue vigorously the prosecution of its war against the Chinese. Isn't there an old Confuscius saying about, "He who rides a tiger fears to dismount"?

One thing the natives of those little Baltic countries now taken over by Russia won't need to worry about is how their elections in the future are going to turn out.

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

As gloomy a face as there is on Capitol Hill, with congress getting back to work after the Chicago convention, is the visage of Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri. Not only did the Democrats do what he didn't want them to do, in session in the Windy City, but he was mainly responsible for their ability to do what they did do.

Senator Clark

Senator Clark, as is well known, is a strenuous anti-New Dealer. He also was an anti-third termer. Furthermore, he was opposed to the vice presidential nomination of Henry A. Wallace, on the ground that he's a Republican.

Now for a glance backward into history.

Until quite recent years there prevailed at Democratic national conventions what was known as the "two-thirds rule." That is to say, two-thirds of the delegates had to vote for presidential and vice presidential aspirants in order to nominate them.

Senator Clark didn't like this rule. He said it was undemocratic—that a simple majority ought to be sufficient to choose candidates, as at Republican conventions. Some folk contended that his real reason for objecting to the rule was different. Their account was that he hated it because his father, the late Speaker Champ Clark, although he could get a majority, couldn't get two-thirds, and therefore was prevented from getting the presidential nomination at the Baltimore convention which choose Woodrow Wilson. Incidentally, Franklin D. Roosevelt was prominent in the delegates' ultimate surge Wilsonward. Some people argue that that fact had something to do with the anti-Roosevelt attitude of the late speaker's son during F. D.'s presidential incumbency.

Two-Thirds Rule Abolished

Be all that as it may, the present Senator Clark fought hard for the aboltition of the Democrats' two-third rule.

The southern states didn't want it abolished. They hadn't enough delegates to give them a convention majority, but they did have enough to prevent any aspirant, to whom they might object, from getting two-thirds. Thus they exercised at least a veto power. Several southerners predicted to Bennett Champ that, if he got that rule abolished, sooner or later he'd be sorry—that he'd want to head off some nomination or another and that a plain majority rule would make it impossible for him to do it.

But Bennett didn't believe them. He continued his fight and he won it. The two-thirds rule was abolished, and Bennett Champ had more than any other one man to do with accomplishing it.

Now, if the two-thirds rule had prevailed in Chicago, President Roosevelt couldn't have been nominated, and neither could Henry A. Wallace have been nominated. Even New Dealers admit as much. Plenty of anti-New Deal southern senators and representatives are pointing out to Bennett Champ today, "We told you so." And Bennett Champ hasn't any very apt rejoinder.

Speaker Bankhead's Case

Speaker William B. Bankhead looks pretty glum, too.

However, he hasn't anything to reproach himself for. To be sure, he was beaten for the vice presidential nomination and undoubtedly it hurt his feelings, but he didn't have anything prominently to do with abolishing the two-thirds rule.

If the rule still had prevailed, Wallace, as previously remarked, certainly couldn't have been nominated. It doesn't necessarily follow that, in that event, Bankhead would have won, but probably he would; it's a fair guess that the delegates would have switched to him, as the second strongest candidate.

What particularly must pain Bankhead is the circumstance that, although reputedly more of an old line than a New Deal Democrat, he's been very faithful to New Deal legislation throughout the Roosevelt administration—only to be chucked into the discard by it, as a vice presidential aspirant.

It Looks Like Waste Motion

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

The United States seems definitely headed toward conscription. The Senate Military Affairs committee has approved an amended Burke-Wadsworth bill, Mr. Roosevelt has indicated his support of the program, and majority congressional sentiment apparently favors some form of universal service.

It very well may be some plan of compulsory service may be necessary to supplement the flow of volunteers in building up our armed forces, although this newspaper is not satisfied with the evidence thus far submitted. It is inclined to believe that the country will produce volunteers as rapidly as they can be trained and equipped.

Assuming, however, that this is not the case, a number of questions press for answers:

What sort of an army are we aiming at? How big do we want it to be? How rapidly do we propose raising it? Are we trying to do an emergency job, or are we building a permanent structure?

Unless we visualize the necessity of marshalling the complete manpower of the nation at once, and unless we are able to absorb, train and equip this manpower promptly, this newspaper cannot see the necessity of anything so elaborate as the pending bill apparently contemplates.

The measure calls for the registration of all males between the ages of 18 and 64 years, a total of some 42,000,000 persons. Of these, 1,500,000 between the ages of 21 and 30 would be conscripted during the first year and go into training for a one-year period.

Later, the active service draft would be extended to the 45-year age level, and "home service" occupations assigned to those in the 18-21 and 45-64 age groups.

It is difficult for this newspaper to visualize the necessity of inducting the whole male population—save those exempt for cause—into the military service. We believe in general military training for our young men. Therefore, we would be inclined to favor a law requiring every able-bodied youth to enter the military service for a definite period upon attaining the age of 18 years, for example, or 21 years. Maintained as a permanent custom, this would give us a definite period upon attaining the age of 18 years, for example, or 21 years. Maintained as a permanent custom, his would give us a definite and approximately equalized group to train every year. And in the course of a few years, it would give us a mightly reserve. In time, every man in the country would have had some military training.

As an emergency defense measure, it may be necessary to go a little faster than this; to take men of more advanced age. But this newspaper can conceive of no valid excuse for registering the man power of the nation today. It looks like a lot of waste motion.

Another Casualty

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

For historical reasons only it is pertinent to comment on the administration's reciprocal tariff policy and on the objection raised in the Philadelphia platform that agreements with other nations negotiated under it had been made "without congressional approval." Regardless of the policy and of the Republican plank events have moved on. The European nations with which we have such pacts are tither subjugated or at war, and our pacts with Latin-America no longer fit.

Point is that reciprocal trade agreements are impossible either in a warring or a Nazi-Fascist world, since they operate only when trade is unfettered. This is because, when we negotiate a trade treaty with any other country, all others share in its benefits except those on what may be called a government black list. The Nazi-Fascist program works the other way around, any trade concession to a country being exclusive. Should we negotiate further treaties we would be giving the dictators tariff concessions; but when they negotiated treaties, they would be barring us from similar concessions—a jug-handled set-up.

Although the administration has not given up its policy in so many words, it is preparing to do so in fact. The proposals for buying Latin-American goods with block-dollars, or buying surplus coffee for distribution in this country under relief stamp plans or otherwise, are admissions that the reciprocal trade policy does not square with present world conditions. Even Canada, with which we have such a treaty, has found it necessary to get away from it.

Quotable Quotes

By Corinne Updegraff Wells in the Rotarian Magazine

Most of us are exceedingly generous with the millions we do not possess, and we smugly offer our lack of money as excuse for our lack of generosity. Yet generosity has surprisingly little to do with money. Many of the most precious gifts bear no price tags. Ingenuity and imagination often provide gifts which make presents purchased with money seem cheap and tawdry by comparison.

Strong Voice an Important Asset For an Officer

By EDWIN C. HILL

Grammar, like everything else, feels the stress of war and rumors of war, as the imperative mood advances and the subjunctive recedes. In this country, we have to work up to it. Muleskinners and traffic policemen have been about our only true masters of the voice of command. At Plattsburg, voice training for officers-to-be is an important detail of the daily drill.

Edwin C. Hill

Business and professional men, accustomed to restrained and tentative office diction, are taught to utter ship-lash commands with the solid impact and carrying power of stern authority. I happen to know one of these men in training—an executive of a large corporation, and one of the most quietly effective executives I ever knew. His inter-office memos are apt to begin, "May I suggest that under the circumstances it would be well to take into consideration—." Now he has to practice barking "r-r-r-r-ight forwar-r-r-d four-r-rs ri-ght, and put plenty of the old mule-kick in it. Of course it has to be. We're going all the way through without water feed on this preparedness trail. But such modes and moods of speech light up the contrasts between war and peace.

* * *

Our Own Voices

Perhaps, some day, like Elijah, we shall hear the "still, small voice" which is not in the great, strong wind, or the earthquake or the fire, but until then we have to set over us our own voices of command, and they can never be merely persuasive. That is, if we want to save our skins.

It is quite possible that some of the office men at Plattsburg, especially those who happen to have the right kind of voices, will find themselves living up to their unsuspected and newly unleashed vocal powers. In such manner we sometimes add cubits to our stature. We have brought forward in our file, from far down the old back road of memory, the story of the choir singer who measured up to his voice.

* * *

Just a Straggler

In a little Indiana town, they formed a company of the state National Guard, when the Spanish-American war was coming on. When the boys drilled on Saturday, up and down the dusty Main street, the choir singer, who will be identified merely as John, was just a straggler in the ranks. John, getting on past thirty, was also just a straggler in the town. He was good-looking and affable, but he had bungled his jobs in the bank, in the post-office and as bookkeeper in the flour mill. He just strung along. But how he could sing! The church was packed to hear John sing Stainer's Te Deum, or a solo part in the anthem. But that just about let John out. Everybody said he never would amount to much.

Barked Into Captaincy

One night when the boys were milling around the bandstand, trying to get untracked, the captain, a shoe-clerk, with a high, squeaky voice, injured his vocal cords and somehow, in the general melee of the next few weeks John got a crack at giving commands. Ed Seeley said he heard him clear down to Barstow's ice house, four miles away, John had a high baritone voice, and he was an instinctive actor. He put a wallop in his commands like a chunk of slag in a glove, and he built up suspense by a long roll of r's before the socko command at the end. In a few weeks he barked himself into the captaincy. His shoulders had been drooping a bit, but now they were straight. He looked everybody straight in the eye, even the old town mortgage shark who had fired him because he caught him playing a mandolin.

* * *

The boys went off to a training camp in Florida, with everybody cheering and John singing commands like the angel Gabriel as they entrained. Florida was as far as they got, but word came back to the town that its company had won some kind of special recognition as the smartest outfit in those parts. John was a hero when they came back and people began to remember that they had always said this boy would make good. John certainly looked and behaved like success. He was nobody's yes-man.

The town banker sent him down to Chicago to help put over a big paying deal. He got a job as a salesman for a company selling contractor's equipment. With a few sharp, incisive sentences, he could get a man on the dotted line. Plenty of girls wanted to marry him. He picked the prettiest and moved to Chicago and when I last heard of him had a many-turreted house on Lake Shore Drive. He lived up to his voice.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

He Understood Women, Could Write about Them, Feel Sorry for Them. He Never Thought He'd Someday Feel Sorry for Himself

By CATHERINE ATWOOD

The Rogue's Tavern is just a quiet little bar down near the river, back of the Morning Post building. But all the leg men from the Times and the Call, as well as the Post, hang out there.

I had barely got inside the door when they crowded around and began slapping me on the back. "Congratulations, Tom! How's it feel to win the David Jordan trophy?"

Somebody ordered scotch all around, and inevtiably there were toasts. "To Tom Greenly, the guy who started the big sweep, single-handed!" and others in the same vein.

"Aren't You, Tom Greenley?"

I wished to the devil they'd keep quiet. Of course, winning the Jordon trophy was swell and would do me a lot of good. It's the cup and the $1,000 that old Maj. Jordan, millionaire publisher, gives each year to the reporter in this state who by his news stories "renders the greatest public service to his community." The winner invariably is moved up on his own paper right away, or else gets a bid from a bigger paper.

But I'd got the trophy on a series of squibs I'd done on vice conditions in Plainsborough, which had started a big clean-up campaign. And the reason I wasn't entirely happy was that the farther this clean-up thing went the more clearly I could see that the least guilty element was the hardest hit and vice versa.

The pitiable, despicable women had been jailed, fined, driven from the city, often penniless. But the overlords kept their safe and obscure distance. They ran the racket like a syndicate and reaped their money, and were as yet eluding prosecution.

"Another one, Tom? On me." It was Don Grey pushing up to the bar beside me and telling Harry to set us up again.

"I beg your pardon, but aren't you Tom Greenly?"

I jumped a foot. I hadn't known there was a woman anywhere near the bar, let alone one that knew me. I turned, and goose pimples chased each other up my spine. She was unpleasant to behold, and unmistakable. Probably a real good looker in her youth which might have been ten years ago or thirty. It was not her years but what life had done to her that made her the sorry picture she was now, sordid, gone to seed, finished.

I called to Harry to set her up with a drink—ten feet down the bar. Anything to get her away. I figured she was getting set either to pull a gun on me or else sob out some tear-jerking story. I honestly was not scared of the gun angle, but a scene was more than my nerves could stand. I think it was because, deep down, I wouldn't have blamed her, whichever she had done.

I turned back to Don. "There's a perfect example right there of what I'm telling you. Ever see a more pitiful piece of human jetsam than that dame?"

"Aw, the river front's full of 'em. Gosh, Tom, snap out of it! You and Marge and the youngster can have a swell vacation on that money, and—"

"Mr. Greenly, don't you—" It was the seedy blonde, at my elbow again. I swung around and cut her short by inviting her to have another drink. Then I moved off. For a second, I'd seen her eyes, and I couldn't stand it. They were the most beautiful color and had the most completely defeated look of any eyes I'd ever seen.

I motioned to Don. We went over and sat in a booth, with me facing away from the woman, and had another drink. I needed it; my nerves were jangling. "When you see what life—and people—can do to people!"

"You're getting maudlin," said Don dryly, "and it isn't becoming."

"That dame must have been a beauty in her day! I can just see her, young and fresh and full of enthusiasm. The same type as Marianne Saunders, the musical comedy star. She was a great beauty, remember? By the way, did I ever tell you that Marianne was from my home town?"

"From that little whistle stop? No!"

"Yeah. As a matter of fact, she and I were sweethearts once." I smiled. It was a pleasant memory and it soothed my nerves. We drank silently. After a while Don leaned his head against the wall and dozed. I went on dreaming about the glomorous Marianne and the gangling college boy 10 years her junior who had loved and worshiped her. It was mostly kindness on her part, I guess, although she did cry that night when we had had to say good-by.

I don't know how long we sat there, but after a while a clock struck three, and at the same instant the phone set up a raucous clamor. It was Mac, the city editor, shouting for me. "They've just fished somebody out of the river, so hustle down to Bagg street pier! And make it snappy!"

The group on the end of the pier made an eerie picture, huddled in the spot of light. They gave up on the pulmotor and pronounced her dead just as I arrived. As I bent over to look at her, my blood ran cold. It was the blonde.

I found something in one of the pockets of her coat and fished it out before the cops could stop me. It was one of those little oiled silk bags women put their cosmetics in, and there was a note in it. When I held it to the light and read it, everything began to whirl. They told me afterward that I crumbled down in a heap and went out like a light.

"I stood it," the note read, "when I couldn't get parts any more, and when my money and my looks both dwindled away. But tonight was too much. A man who once loved me doesn't even recognize me. Good-by, Marianne Saunders." — Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Boy Drowns after Saving Sister

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., July 29 (AP)—Roy Louis Light, 15, drowned in the Potomac river eight miles east of here soon after saving his 13-year-old sister Ethel from a similar fate.

The children and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Light of Martinsburg, were on a picnic when Ethel went into the river for a swim.

She called for help and Roy jumped in the water, pulled her to a shallow spot then went under himself. The body was recovered an hour later by Wayne Tucker of Martinsburg. Efforts to revive the boy failed.

Coroner C. G. Power held death accidental. The funeral will be Wednesday.

Said He Would Die In July and He Does

DUNN, N. C., July 29 (AP)—For the last fifteen years Carson C. Surles, 59, told everybody he would die in July, 1940.

Last week he went to all his relatives and told them goodbye, invited them to his funeral. Then he cleaned off his cemetery lot, and made arrangements for his funeral with an undertaker here.

Sunday he told everyone at the filling station where he worked:

"Well, I guess it's about time I was going home and getting ready."

A few hours later he was a dying man. Dr. J. R. Johnson, a physician, arrived. He said an examination did not show the cause of Surles's death.

Officers said there was no evidence of suicide or foul play; Surles died "of natural causes."

Orchardists To Take Up Soil Problems

HAGERSTOWN, Md., July 29 (AP)—Problems of moisture and soil conservation will be reviewed Aug. 6 at a meeting of 100 orchardists from western Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia.

The conference is sponsored by the University of Maryland Agronomy and Horticultural department through the county agents.

Harry Weigle will be chairman.

Distiller Held for Pollution of Stream

WESTMINSTER, Md., July 29 (AP)—One of two distilling company officials charged in a warrant with destroying fish life through pollution of the north branch of Patapsco Falls was arrested here by the Carroll county sheriff.

State's Attorney George N. Fringer said S. L. Goldheim, manager of the Monticello Distilling Company plant at Cedarhurst, was taken into custody.

Thomas J. McConville, of Schenley, Pa., company president, also was named in the warrant, the state's attorney said.

Frank Bentz, chief clerk to the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, said he had received reports that between 10,000 and 30,000 fish in the Patapsco river had been killed since July 19.

The warrant, in effect, accused Goldheim and McConville of responsibility for discharge of poisonous wastes into the falls, thereby causing destruction of the fish.

Fringer said he recommended that bail for Goldheim be set at $1,000. A preliminary hearing will be held when Magistrate John Wood returns from his vacation, the state's attorney added.

The maximum fine for such an offense is $300, Fringer added.

Last week he went to all his relatives and told them goodbye, invited them to his funeral. Then he cleaned off his cemetery lot, and made arrangements for his funeral with an undertaker here.

Sunday he told everyone at the filling station where he worked:

"Well, I guess it's about time I was going home and get'ing ready."

A few hours later he was a dying man. Dr. J. R. Johnson, a physician, arrived. He said an examination did not show the cause of Surles's death.

Officers said there was no evidence of suicide or foul play; Surles died "of natural causes."

The conference is sponsored by the University of Maryland Agronomy and Horticultural department through the county agents.

Harry Weigle will be chairman.

Distiller Held for Pollution of Stream

WESTMINSTER, Md., July 29 (AP)—One of two distilling company officials charged in a warrant with destroying fish life through pollution of the north branch of Patapsco Falls was arrested here by the Carroll county sheriff.

State's Attorney George N. Pfinger said S. L. Goldheim, manager of the Monticello Distilling Company plant at Cedarhurst, was taken into custody.

Thomas J. McConville, of Schenley, Pa., company president, also was named in the warrant, the state's attorney said.

Frank Bentz, chief clerk to the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, said he had received reports that between 10,000 and 30,000 fish in the Patapsco river had been killed since July 19.

The warrant, in effect, accused Goldheim and McConville of responsibility for discharge of poisonous wastes into the falls, thereby causing destruction of the fish.

Pfinger said he recommended that bail for Goldheim be set at $1,000. A preliminary hearing will be held when Magistrate John Wood returns from his vacation, the state's attorney added.

The maximum fine for such an offense is $300, Pfinger added.

IT SHOWS THE TREMENDOUS IMPROVEMENT IN GULF GASOLINES!

THIS CHART, we hope, will give you a better picture than could a thousand words of the recent amazing improvement in Gulf gasolines. It is based on a scientific test of gasoline quality today—a test that is used by many of our competitors, as well as by ourselves. The chart shows the fair comparative measure of step-up in both GOOD GULF and GULF NO-NOX . . . a step-up which is no intangible "engineering triumph" but one which may be enjoyed by you : : : in your car!

Good Gulf is now boosted to its all-time high : : : will perform in your motor second to no regular-priced fuel. Gulf No-Nox is now (as always) truly superior to all regular motor fuels. It is, even more than formerly, knockproof under all normal driving conditions. NO REGULAR GASOLINE—NOT ONE—CAN COMPARE WITH GULF NO-NOX!

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

She handed the object to the commissioner.

"COULD anyone have wanted your life?" the commissioner had asked Linda just as she saw the initial in the handkerchief which she had retrieved from the floor of the office.

A small, hand-blocked initial appeared in one corner. It was an Old English "M." It might have stood for Mina or it might have stood for Markley or maybe it just represented a Margaret or a Mary.

She gazed at it, fascinated. Still not answering the question, she lifted the small square to her nose and the scent was stronger now.

She handed the object to the commissioner. "I found this on the floor just now. I thought it was mine until I picked it up."

"An 'M,'" the man said. "And your name is Linda Avery and the dead girl is Clarabell Ackerman. Do you know an enemy whose name begins with 'M'?"

Linda hesitated. If only she had someone to guide her. If Ronnie would come, or Rob had been present they would answer for her. It was quite possible that the murderer had mistaken Clarabell Ackerman for her, but that murderer couldn't be Mina Nevins. She had been on the air at the time of the murder.

Her hesitation was noticed by the police. "Better answer all questions, Miss Avery. It will be easier. And simpler."

"Could I see you alone?" she asked, and her voice sounded small and tired even to her own ears.

She dared not mention Mina Nevins in front of these reporters. Some of them had gone, scampering to the nearest telephones to tell their night editors to change a page.

Whether the commissioner would have said that he would talk to her alone or not, Linda never knew, for at that moment the door opened and a tall figure appeared.

"Oh, Robert!" She was across the room, and his strong arms were steadying her, before the words had left her lips.

There was peace and poise and comfort in his presence. She was so joyfully, tearfully glad that he had come.

"Someone sent word to your apartment that you were here. No one was home, but I happened to be passing," he said. "Of course I came right away."

Briefly Robert was informed of the events of the past hour. His eyes sobered at the sight of the girl who slumped over the desk. No move had been made to conceal her or take her away.

"Couldn't we have a conference, commissioner?" Robert asked. "You said that this murder might be a case of mistaken identity. It's quite true, and yet—"

"May I talk alone to Mr. Barton?" Linda asked. "For just a moment, please?"

The man hesitated. From the canyon of the streets below there came the subdued sound of the night traffic. The theaters were long since out and the play spots were gay and crowded, and the taxicabs carried groups from one to another.

The rain was growing steadier and harder, and it beat against the windows. Grateful as she was for Robert's protection, Linda wished anxiously that Ronnie would come. Maybe he hadn't received any message. And why didn't the commissioner give his consent?

"Everything will come out in the investigation and the coroner's inquest," the official answered. "Any light you may throw on the happening now will save you embarrassment later. However, if you wish a conference, the inner office will do nicely. I'll stay on guard."

It was Robert who answered. "I think you had better come with us. I've a pretty good idea what Miss Avery hesitates to say. It involves a third party, and on the surface sounds ridiculous."

Robert took the lead in the conversation, but it was Linda who mentioned the fact that Mina Nevins could not have left the room where she was broadcasting to come to the office, do a murder, leave, and continue with the program.

In the first place, there would not have been time for her to even reach the place, let alone return. In the second place, the doors always were locked during a broadcast and she could not have left the auditorium where she was speaking during the musical intermission.

"And in the third place, there will be dozens of witnesses to testify she was on hand all the time," the commissioner added. "I'm afraid she's out. But that 'M'—stands for Mina. How many girls in your office have the initial 'M'—models, office force, anyone?"

Linda thought carefully. There wasn't an "M" in the group. She would have declared that there were several, speaking off-handedly, but the inventory showed none.

"Could a model, applying for a place on the Bagley list, have dropped it?" the query came.

"Probably, but the charwoman who cleaned the office earlier in the evening would have found it."

The charwoman, summoned, knew nothing. Her eyes were a tired blue and she looked often at the night watchman.

Back in the larger room, Linda noted that a sheet had been thrown over the dead form of the girl. There was something more frightening in that disguise than there had been in the figure of the girl itself.

"Didn't you bring anyone up here, anyone outside of Miss Avery?" the detectives kept asking the elevator operator, who persisted in his denial.

"Nobody."

"Then how could anyone get in? Twelve flights are a long distance to climb. Humph! If someone did this as an outside job, that person must have been on the stairs while the commotion was going on and made an escape while the door was unguarded. Well, we'll have a coroner's inquest in the morning."

Ronnie came then, face white and worried. "They held me up to question me about all this," he said. "I didn't know what had happened. Seems that you were supposed to be killed and somebody else got it." He put his arm around Linda, searched her face. "All right, Linda, sweet?"

Suddenly she knew where Ronnie had been. Someone had taken him to the police station, remembering that Linda stood in the way of any profitable marriage he might wish to make with the daughter of the man who was giving him a fling at stardom.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

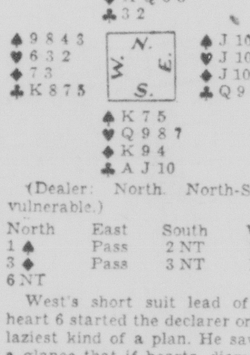
TAKE OUT INSURANCE

Making your contract in rubber bridge is so much more important than getting an extra trick that it will pay you to give up all hope for the latter in order to insure the success of the main enterprise. Plenty of declarers come to grief because they seek every trick that might possibly be made, even though doing so injects a risk which could be avoided.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	3 NT	Pass
6 NT

West's short suit lead of the heart 6 started the declarer on the laziest kind of a plan. He saw at a glance that if hearts, diamonds and spades would all break for him, he could make a grand slam by then taking the club A for the thirteenth trick. Reading the heart 6 as probably the top of a trebleton, he tried that suit first and was happy to see it work out as he desired.

Next the spades were attacked, but they didn't break. The contract could still be made, however, if the diamonds were divided, but they also proved to be distributed on a four-two basis. The contract was now hopeless, regardless of how the missing club honors were located, unless East held both and would make the foolish mistake of not playing one of them on the small card lead from dummy. South tried the club 10 on the first round of the suit, but West won with the K and then cashed the setting spade.

Proper safety would have consisted of first finessing the club 10, deliberately giving up a trick to the opponents, then trying the three suits in succession. After only one of them broke fortunately, the declarer could have finessed the clubs a second time and would thus have made his contract. The reason would be that the one trick he lost was before West had a set-up fourth-rounder in spades.

Tip at Intervals

In taking a month's cruise tips should be given at intervals of, say, two weeks, instead of waiting until the end of the voyage, as is usual on transatlantic voyages. A reasonable standard for such fortnightly tips would be the amount which would be normally given for the same service on a transatlantic voyage.

Tell Your Escort

If you are dining with a man in a public place, do not call a waiter yourself. Tell your escort what you want and he will summon the waiter.

Notify Valet

If you are staying at a hotel and put laundry in the servidor, it is wise to notify the valet, as servidors are not always inspected daily.

Men Should Rise

Soap, Water Route to Beauty

"It is supposed that the daily bath has become an institution."

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE DOESN'T have to have an ocean to be a bathing beauty. The demon tubber always looks as fresh as a daisy. Nothing like the good old scrubbing to give color to the complexion. The skin is an important organ of elimination. Soap and water and a heavy brush keep it active.

It is supposed that the daily bath has become an institution, but dress fitters say they don't believe it. The deadly "B O" is still insulting the public nose. Cleanliness is not only a health law, but it is the first law of beauty and several more besides.

Refreshing Cold Baths

The human hide is always on the go. New cells are forming, old cells are shedding. The old cells, if permitted to remain on the surface of the skin, give off an offensive odor, especially if they are filmed with salty chemicals exuded by sweat glands. Bathing with plenty of elbow grease removes cutaneous debris, hustles up the blood streams, gives softness and smoothness to the epidermal coat.

Cold baths are refreshing, but not cleansing. A cold shower should follow the soapy cleansing, though not for long unless there is a quick reaction. Alternating hot and cold showers are recommended for the busy lady who chases around all day and expects to fare forth for the merry evening. They pick her up, put her on her toes and touch her cheeks with pink carnation bloom.

SALLY'S SALLIES

Is a Real Bore

Not in Good Taste

HERE'S A NEW ONE FOR YOU, GIRLS!

For young women who have suffered the anguish of mud-spattered stockings on a rainy day, these "leg raincoats" seem to offer a happy solution. They were invented by Mrs. Josephine Grezlak of Omaha, Neb., and are being demonstrated by a model. They can be rolled and carried in purse or pocket.

Tip at Intervals

In taking a month's cruise tips should be given at intervals of, say, two weeks, instead of waiting until the end of the voyage, as is usual on transatlantic voyages. A reasonable standard for such fortnightly tips would be the amount which would be normally given for the same service on a transatlantic voyage.

Tell Your Escort

If you are dining with a man in a public place, do not call a waiter yourself. Tell your escort what you want and he will summon the waiter.

Notify Valet

If you are staying at a hotel and put laundry in the servidor, it is wise to notify the valet, as servidors are not always inspected daily.

Men Should Rise

Soap, Water Route to Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE DOESN'T have to have an ocean to be a bathing beauty. The demon tubber always looks as fresh as a daisy. Nothing like the good old scrubbing to give color to the complexion. The skin is an important organ of elimination. Soap and water and a heavy brush keep it active.

It is supposed that the daily bath has become an institution, but dress fitters say they don't believe it. The deadly "B O" is still insulting the public nose. Cleanliness is not only a health law, but it is the first law of beauty and several more besides.

Refreshing Cold Baths

The human hide is always on the go. New cells are forming, old cells are shedding. The old cells, if permitted to remain on the surface of the skin, give off an offensive odor, especially if they are filmed with salty chemicals exuded by sweat glands. Bathing with plenty of elbow grease removes cutaneous debris, hustles up the blood streams, gives softness and smoothness to the epidermal coat.

Cold baths are refreshing, but not cleansing. A cold shower should follow the soapy cleansing, though not for long unless there is a quick reaction. Alternating hot and cold showers are recommended for the busy lady who chases around all day and expects to fare forth for the merry evening. They pick her up, put her on her toes and touch her cheeks with pink carnation bloom.

SALLY'S SALLIES

Is a Real Bore

Not in Good Taste

Love Without Music

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

"COULD anyone have wanted your life?" the commissioner had asked Linda just as she saw the initial in the handkerchief which she had retrieved from the floor of the office.

A small, hand-blocked initial appeared in one corner. It was an Old English "M." It might have stood for Mina or it might have stood for Markley or maybe it just represented a Margaret or a Mary.

She gazed at it, fascinated. Still not answering the question, she lifted the small square to her nose and the scent was stronger now.

She handed the object to the commissioner. "I found this on the floor just now. I thought it was mine until I picked it up."

"An 'M,'" the man said. "And your name is Linda Avery and the dead girl is Clarabell Ackerman. Do you know an enemy whose name begins with 'M'?"

Linda hesitated. If only she had someone to guide her. If Ronnie would come, or Rob had been present they would answer for her. It was quite possible that the murderer had mistaken Clarabell Ackerman for her, but that murderer couldn't be Mina Nevins. She had been on the air at the time of the murder.

Her hesitation was noticed by the police. "Better answer all questions, Miss Avery. It will be easier. And simpler."

"Could I see you alone?" she asked, and her voice sounded small and tired even to her own ears.

She dared not mention Mina Nevins in front of these reporters. Some of them had gone, scampering to the nearest telephones to tell their night editors to change a page.

Whether the commissioner would have said that he would talk to her alone or not, Linda never knew, for at that moment the door opened and a tall figure appeared.

"Oh, Robert!" She was across the room, and his strong arms were steadying her, before the words had left her lips.

There was peace and poise and comfort in his presence. She was so joyfully, tearfully glad that he had come.

"Someone sent word to your apartment that you were here. No one was home, but I happened to be passing," he said. "Of course I came right away."

Briefly Robert was informed of the events of the past hour. His eyes sobered at the sight of the girl who slumped over the desk. No move had been made to conceal her or take her away.

"Couldn't we have a conference, commissioner?" Robert asked. "You said that this murder might be a case of mistaken identity. It's quite true, and yet—"

"May I talk alone to Mr. Barton?" Linda asked. "For just a moment, please?"

The man hesitated. From the canyon of the streets below there came the subdued sound of the night traffic. The theaters were long since out and the play spots were gay and crowded, and the taxicabs carried groups from one to another.

The rain was growing steadier and harder, and it beat against the windows. Grateful as she was for Robert's protection, Linda wished anxiously that Ronnie would come. Maybe he hadn't received any message. And why didn't the commissioner give his consent?

She handed the object to the commissioner.

"Everything will come out in the investigation and the coroner's inquest," the official answered. "Any light you may throw on the happening now will save you embarrassment later. However, if you wish a conference, the inner office will do nicely. I'll stay on guard."

It was Robert who answered. "I think you had better come with us. I've a pretty good idea what Miss Avery hesitates to say. It involves a third party, and on the surface sounds ridiculous."

Robert took the lead in the conversation, but it was Linda who mentioned the fact that Mina Nevins could not have left the room where she was broadcasting to come to the office, do a murder, leave, and continue with the program.

In the first place, there would not have been time for her to even reach the place, let alone return. In the second place, the doors always were locked during a broadcast and she could not have left the auditorium where she was speaking during the musical intermission.

"And in the third place, there will be dozens of witnesses to testify she was on hand all the time," the commissioner added. "I'm afraid she's out. But that 'M'—stands for Mina. How many girls in your office have the initial 'M'—models, office force, anyone?"

Linda thought carefully. There wasn't an "M" in the group. She would have declared that there were several, speaking off-handedly, but the inventory showed none.

"Could a model, applying for a place on the Bagley list, have dropped it?" the query came.

"Probably, but the charwoman who cleaned the office earlier in the evening would have found it."

The charwoman, summoned, knew nothing. Her eyes were a tired blue and she looked often at the night watchman.

Back in the larger room, Linda noted that a sheet had been thrown over the dead form of the girl. There was something more frightening in that disguise than there had been in the figure of the girl itself.

"Didn't you bring anyone up here, anyone outside of Miss Avery?" the detectives kept asking the elevator operator, who persisted in his denial.

"Nobody."

"Then how could anyone get in? Twelve flights are a long distance to climb. Humph! If someone did this as an outside job, that person must have been on the stairs while the commotion was going on and made an escape while the door was unguarded. Well, we'll have a coroner's inquest in the morning."

Ronnie came then, face white and worried. "They held me up to question me about all this," he said. "I didn't know what had happened. Seems that you were supposed to be killed and somebody else got it." He put his arm around Linda, searched her face. "All right, Linda, sweet?"

Suddenly she knew where Ronnie had been. Someone had taken him to the police station, remembering that Linda stood in the way of any profitable marriage he might wish to make with the daughter of the man who was giving him a fling at stardom.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

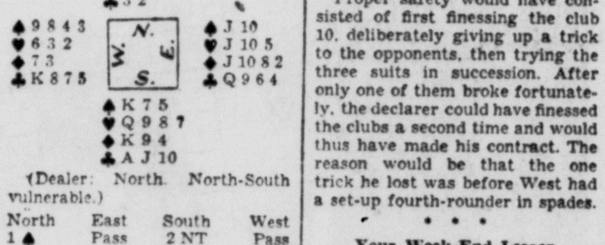
TAKE OUT INSURANCE

Making your contract in rubber bridge is so much more important than getting an extra trick that it will pay you to give up all hope for the latter in order to insure the success of the main enterprise. Plenty of declarers come to grief because they seek every trick that might possibly be made, even though doing so injects a risk which could be avoided.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	3 NT	Pass
6 NT

West's short suit lead of the heart 6 started the declarer on the laziest kind of a plan. He saw at a glance that if hearts, diamonds and spades would all break for him, he could make a grand slam by then taking the club A for the thirteenth trick. Reading the heart 6 as probably the top of a trebleton, he tried that suit first and was happy to see it work out as he desired.

Next the spades were attacked, but they didn't break. The contract could still be made, however, if the diamonds were divided, but they also proved to be distributed on a four-two basis. The contract was now hopeless, regardless of how the missing club honors were located, unless East held both and would make the foolish mistake of not playing one of them on the small card lead from dummy. South tried the club 10 on the first round of the suit, but West won with the K and then cashed the setting spade.

Proper safety would have consisted of first finessing the club 10, deliberately giving up a trick to the opponents, then trying the three suits in succession. After only one of them broke fortunately, the declarer could have finessed the clubs a second time and would thus have made his contract. The reason would be that the one trick he lost was before West had a set-up fourth-rounder in spades.

Drive Carefully When the Family Occupies Auto

Especially During Summer When Travel Is Heavy on Highways

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

During the summer there is increased automobile traveling by a part or all the family. There have been instances of a whole family being destroyed in the twinkling of an eye or some members left crippled for the rest of their lives. When the child is crippled for a lifetime see how long he must suffer and be handicapped.

Sometimes the family will start out in a car that is not safe. The parents may know it is not safe for they may have failed to have the car properly tested or repaired. Sometimes, of course, the family in a wreck are the innocent victims of another car driven recklessly. But most accidents to a car and the people in it are caused by reckless driving of the car and, more often than not by driving too fast.

Bragging Speeders

Within a few months I have listened to several fathers in different parts of the United States talking about trips they are about to take with their family or have taken, bragging about the speed they have made and the hair-breadth escapes they have had. I recall one instance in which the twelve-year-old boy stood with wide eyes, adding an excited word now and then about "how fast we went"—the young hero worshipper! If this boy lives to drive a car by and by, I wonder what.

Among these bragging fathers were two preachers, a school superintendent, a doctor, an automobile salesman, a day laborer. One of the preachers boasted of 65 and 70 miles with a trailer. He had a family of five along.

A good many of us have driven faster than the law allows. If and when we do I can't see that it is anything to brag about. It doesn't take brains to speed. A moron, even an idiot, can step on the gas.

Instead of bragging about fast driving we should be ashamed of it, ashamed that we have endangered other people's lives, precious lives. I wish preachers and their parishioners, all of us indeed, would include in our prayers a plea to be forgiven for threatening innocent people with death when we speed in a car.

Driver's Responsibility

When a father or mother drives alone, not only his or her own life may be at stake. Even then the life of some other persons on the highway or street is endangered. And then when this parent drives with the other parent and the children and babies—see the responsibility he or she assumes.

A few years ago Mrs. Myers and I and our children entered upon a solemn covenant whereby we afreed that none of us would exceed 50 miles an hour on the highway and not more than 35 miles on crooked country roads, reducing these speed limits as reason might dictate.

I can remember when I used to roar at my oldest children when they were driving "not to go so fast." Let me suggest to parents that, regardless of the speed limit, your family, or you alone, adopt, you will be able to gain better cooperation of your child who is driving if, instead of saying, "Don't drive so fast," you will say, "Don't drive over —— miles."

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Should elementary school children be allowed to carry home their free text-books?

A. By all means, especially their reading texts. Many an under-privaleged home will have no other book. Besides, these books afford good parent-child companionship and the school child can read profitably for them to the baby brother or sister.

Q. Is it ever safe to laugh at a child when he had not meant to be funny?

A. It is not; to laugh or even smile at his innocent, serious utterances is about the most dangerous thing one can do; and if he tries to be funny just to show off, laughing at him also might be harmful. Nevertheless, when the child of any age attempts humar, express your appreciation, however crude. Encourage him at repartee and telling jokes.

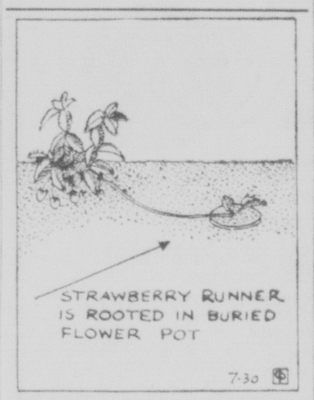
TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)



Strawberry beds need to be renewed every three or four years. New plants for this purpose are easily propagated from funners of the old plants. Pot propagation is an excellent method of doing this.

To secure extra fine plants sink three-inch flower pots into the soil up to their rims near the strawberry bed, as shown in the Garden-Graph. These pots should be filled with fibrous loam. Fasten the tips of runners from the strawberry plants across the soil in the pots, as illustrated. Use hairpins to fasten the ends of the runners securely so strong winds will not blow them off the pots before they start to root. For this type of pot propagation it is best to select only the strongest runners from plants which have fruited well. Runners from "blind parents" are unfruitful.

When the pots are filled with roots from the runners, sever the latter from the parent plant. Then remove the new plants from the pots and plant them out. These plants should bear fruit the following year.

* * *

Most roses stop blooming unless actively growing and, if not given extra attention now, may bloom no more until autumn. They should receive a light mulch or cultivation and be kept well-watered and fertilized so as to keep them growing.

Fort McHenry Is Struck by Lightning

BALTIMORE, July 29 (AP) — Fort McHenry—Francis Scott Key's inspiration for the "Star Spangled Banner"—was struck by lightning yesterday.

The bolt, knocking thirty bricks out of place, "did more damage to the fort than the British did during their bombardment" during the war of 1812, said R. P. Holland, fort superintendent.

Drive Carefully When the Family Occupies Auto

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

During the summer there is increased automobile traveling by a part or all the family. There have been instances of a whole family being destroyed in the twinkling of an eye or some members left crippled for the rest of their lives. When the child is crippled for a lifetime see how long he must suffer and be handicapped.

Sometimes the family will start out in a car that is not safe. The parents may know it is not safe for they may have failed to have the car properly tested or repaired. Sometimes, of course, the family in a wreck are the innocent victims of another car driven recklessly. But most accidents to a car and the people in it are caused by reckless driving of the car and, more often than not by driving too fast.

Bragging Speeders

Within a few months I have listened to several fathers in different parts of the United States talking about trips they are about to take with their family or have taken, bragging about the speed they have made and the hair-breadth escapes they have had. I recall one instance in which the twelve-year-old boy stood with wide eyes, adding an excited word now and then about "how fast we went"—the young hero worshipper! If this boy lives to drive a car by and by, I wonder what.

Among these bragging fathers were two preachers, a school superintendent, a doctor, an automobile salesman, a day laborer. One of the preachers boasted of 65 and 70 miles with a trailer. He had a family of five along.

A good many of us have driven faster than the law allows. If and when we do I can't see that it is anything to brag about. It doesn't take brains to speed. A moron, even an idiot, can step on the gas.

Instead of bragging about fast driving we should be ashamed of it, ashamed that we have endangered other people's lives, precious lives. I wish preachers and their parishioners, all of us indeed, would include in our prayers a plea to be forgiven for threatening innocent people with death when we speed in a car.

Driver's Responsibility

When a father or mother drives alone, not only his or her own life may be at stake. Even then the life of some other persons on the highway or street is endangered. And then when this parent drives with the other parent and the children and babies—see the responsibility he or she assumes.

A few years ago Mrs. Myers and I and our children entered upon a solemn covenant whereby we afreed that none of us would exceed 50 miles an hour on the highway and not more than 35 miles on crooked country roads, reducing these speed limits as reason might dictate.

I can remember when I used to nag at my oldest children when they were driving "not to go so fast." Let me suggest to parents that, regardless of the speed limit, your family, or you alone, adopt, you will be able to gain better cooperation of your child who is driving if, instead of saying, "Don't drive so fast," you will say, "Don't drive over —— miles."

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Should elementary school children be allowed to carry home their free text-books?

A. By all means, especially their reading texts. Many an under-privaleged home will have no other book. Besides, these books afford good parent-child companionship and the school child can read profitably for them to the baby brother or sister.

Q. Is it ever safe to laugh at a child when he had not meant to be funny?

A. It is not; to laugh or even smile at his innocent, serious utterances is about the most dangerous thing one can do; and if he tries to be funny just to show off, laughing at him also might be harmful. Nevertheless, when the child of any age attempts humar, express your appreciation, however crude. Encourage him at repartee and telling jokes.

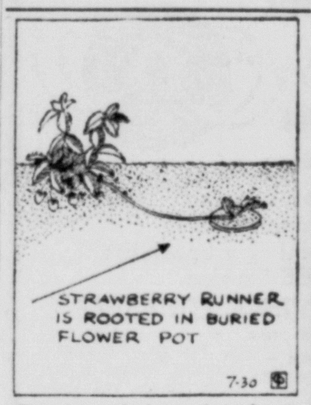
TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)



Strawberry beds need to be renewed every three or four years. New plants for this purpose are easily propagated from runners of the old plants. Pot propagation is an excellent method of doing this.

To secure extra fine plants sink three-inch flower pots into the soil up to their rims near the strawberry bed, as shown in the Garden-Graph. These pots should be filled with fibrous loam. Fasten the tips of runners from the strawberry plants across the soil in the pots, as illustrated. Use hairpins to fasten the ends of the runners securely so strong winds will not blow them off the pots before they start to root. For this type of pot propagation it is best to select only the strongest runners from plants which have fruited well. Runners from "blind parents" are unfruitful.

When the pots are filled with roots from the runners, sever the latter from the parent plant. Then remove the new plants from the pots and plant them out. These plants should bear fruit the following year.

* * *

Most roses stop blooming unless actively growing and, if not given extra attention now, may bloom no more until autumn. They should receive a light mulch or cultivation and be kept well-watered and fertilized so as to keep them growing.

Thunderstorms Send Mercury Tumbling from High 90's in W. Va.

By The Associated Press

Welcome thunderstorms cut through Central and Southern West Virginia yesterday hammering down temperatures from the high 90's, but not before the state had recorded its sixteenth death.

Sections around Clarksburg, Huntington and Charleston were visited by showers in mid-afternoon, after recording temperatures from 97 to 100.

The high in Huntington was 100, but late afternoon showers toppled the reading 25 degrees. Clarksburg reported a maximum of 97, and at Charleston it was 97.5 degrees.

Bobby Lee Barber, 9, was drowned at Huntington, increasing to sixteen the toll of the 11-day hot spell—all but two victims of drowning.

Although some sections were visited by showers Sunday and the Eastern Panhandle suffered from a severe electrical storm, temperatures during the night failed to go below 70 degrees in most places.

From that point the thermometers started up this morning and in several cities had reached 90 degrees or better by 10 a. m.

Bluefield, the "air - conditioned city" where there will be free lemonade if the mercury goes over 90 degrees, almost saw that happen yesterday.

Louis Zaltzman, Norfolk and Western railway timekeeper who reports the official figures, read a Sunday high of 89.95.

"You could have measured the difference with the point of a pin but it didn't quite reach 90," said Zaltzman.

The Chamber of Commernce has promised lemonade to the populance when it hits 90 degrees, and the West Virginian hotel will not charge for its rooms.

Keep Communists Off W. Va. Ballot, Legion Asks in Injunction Suit

Fraud and Misrepresentation Charged in Circulation of Petition

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 29 (AP)—The West Virginia American Legion, charging fraud and misrepresentation in the circulation of a Communist nominating petition, asked Circuit Judge Julian F. Bouchelle today for an injunction to prevent placing the ticket on the November ballot.

T. F. McWilliams of Logan, state Legion commander, and G. Stanley Hamric of Charleston, state adjutant, were the principal plaintiffs in the action directed against Secretary of State William S. O'Brien, as the official in charge of state ballots. Oscar O. Wheeler of Beckley, Communist candidate for governor, and seven others.

The papers in the case are returnable August 5.

The Legion has contested the legality of the nominating petition ever since it was filed May 13, the day before the primary election.

Appended to the bill of complaint in the injunction suit, which asked both a temporary and permanent order, were 1,120 affidavits by persons who said their signatures were forged or obtained through misrepresentation.

In all, there were 587 plaintiffs, including McWilliams, Hamric and persons who made affidavits in Boone, Cabell, Fayette, Logan, McDowell, Raleigh and Wyoming counties.

Other affidavits included 523 from Marion county, eleven from Preston and one from Pennsylvania.

The defendants, in addition to O'Brien and Wheeler, where the eight presidential electors named on the Communist petition, among them Wheeler's wife.

The bill of complaint set forth that 8,299 signatures are needed for placing the ticket on the general election ballot.

W. Elliott Neffien of Charleston, former state Legion commander and one of the attorneys for the legion, noted that 1,120 affidavits are being presented for the purpose of disqualifying those signatures and commented that "we are taking no chances. That number should take care of any conceivable contingency."

Among the misrepresentations the plaintiffs claim were made in connection with the circulation of the petition were:

That it would help the "Scottsboro boys"; that it would take mechanical loaders out of the mine; to help the colored race; to demand a third term for President Roosevelt; to obtain free textbooks and to "better school conditions that my children would not have to sit on hard benches."

The complaint specifically charged Oscar Wheeler with representing variously that the petition advocated an old age pension plan and the candidacy of a negro for vice-president, a third term for President Roosevelt, good roads and better conditions.

Oakland Is Named As Site of First Meeting Aug. 12

Lewis Jones Elected Temporary Chairman; Committees Appointed

OAKLAND, July 29 — A meeting which has for its purpose the formation of a permanent organization of Young Republicans is being looked forward to here in Oakland. The meeting is called for Monday evening, August 12, in the city hall here.

Displaying earnestness of purpose rather than a temporary display of enthusiasm, about twenty-five young members of the Republican party met last week to lay the groundwork for the organization.

Expansion Plans

Although the meeting is called for Oakland and immediate vicinity, the plan is to expand the organization throughout the county with a number of unit organizations in the various towns and communities.

The meeting was called by Julius C. Renninger, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, who stated quite a number of people appeared interested in such an organization. He explained that its membership could aid materially in increasing the majority for Republican candidates in this county.

A comparison of election figures taken from the official returns showed that in 1936 and 1932 the Republican majority for presidential candidates had been just 805 and 816, while the three terms prior to that the majorities had been 3,203, 1,368 and 1,735. In 1916 Hughes carried the county against Wilson by only 777.

Hope To Up Majority

With Republicans having a majority of 2,698 in this county (5744 compared to 3046 Democrats registered) it was pointed out that with an active Republican group at work assisting the Republican committee, there was no reason that there could not be a majority this year reaching at least 3,500, especially with the tendency of some Democrats to swing toward Willkie because of their opposition to Roosevelt's attempt to win a third term.

The group organized temporarily by electing Lewis Jones, temporary chairman. Other officers named temporarily were Mrs. William Naylor, first vice-chairman; Robert Lawton, second vice-chairman; Mrs. Julius Renninger, secretary; and George H. Hanst, treasurer.

Committees Named

Mr. Jones named a constitution committee consisting of Julius C. Renninger, Paul McIntire, and Irvin Feld; an entertainment committee including Robert Lawton, Clayton Winters, Mrs. Hugh Echard, Miss Helen Schlossnagle, Mrs. Lewis Jones; a publicity committee consisting of George Hanst, Miss Coral McRobie, Leonard Hath-

Thunderstorms Send Mercury Tumbling from High 90's in W. Va.

By The Associated Press

Welcome thunderstorms cut through Central and Southern West Virginia yesterday hammering down temperatures from the high 90's, but not before the state had recorded its sixteenth death.

Sections around Clarksburg, Huntington and Charleston were visited by showers in mid-afternoon, after recording temperatures from 97 to 100.

The high in Huntington was 100, but late afternoon showers toppled the reading 25 degrees. Clarksburg reported a maximum of 97, and at Charleston it was 97.5 degrees.

Bobby Lee Barber, 9, was drowned at Huntington, increasing to sixteen the toll of the 11-day hot spell—all but two victims of drowning.

Although some sections were visited by showers Sunday and the Eastern Panhandle suffered from a severe electrical storm, temperatures during the night failed to go below 70 degrees in most places.

From that point the thermometers started up this morning and in several cities had reached 90 degrees or better by 10 a. m.

Bluefield, the "air - conditioned city" where there will be free lemonade if the mercury goes over 90 degrees, almost saw that happen yesterday.

Louis Zaltzman, Norfolk and Western railway timekeeper who reports the official figures, read a Sunday high of 89.95.

"You could have measured the difference with the point of a pin but it didn't quite reach 90," said Zaltzman.

The Chamber of Commernce has promised lemonade to the populance when it hits 90 degrees, and the West Virginian hotel will not charge for its rooms.

Keep Communists Off W. Va. Ballot, Legion Asks in Injunction Suit

Fraud and Misrepresentation Charged in Circulation of Petition

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 29 (AP)—The West Virginia American Legion, charging fraud and misrepresentation in the circulation of a Communist nominating petition, asked Circuit Judge Julian F. Bouchelle today for an injunction to prevent placing the ticket on the November ballot.

T. F. McWilliams of Logan, state Legion commander, and G. Stanley Hamric of Charleston, state adjutant, were the principal plaintiffs in the action directed against Secretary of State William S. O'Brien, as the official in charge of state ballots. Oscar O. Wheeler of Beckley, Communist candidate for governor, and seven others.

The papers in the case are returnable August 5.

The Legion has contested the legality of the nominating petition ever since it was filed May 13, the day before the primary election.

Appended to the bill of complaint in the injunction suit, which asked both a temporary and permanent order, were 1,120 affidavits by persons who said their signatures were forged or obtained through misrepresentation.

In all, there were 587 plaintiffs, including McWilliams, Hamric and persons who made affidavits in Boone, Cabell, Fayette, Logan, McDowell, Raleigh and Wyoming counties.

Other affidavits included 523 from Marion county, eleven from Preston and one from Pennsylvania.

The defendants, in addition to O'Brien and Wheeler, where the eight presidential electors named on the Communist petition, among them Wheeler's wife.

The bill of complaint set forth that 8,299 signatures are needed for placing the ticket on the general election ballot.

W. Elliott Nefflen of Charleston, former state Legion commander and one of the attorneys for the legion, noted that 1,120 affidavits are being presented for the purpose of disqualifying those signatures and commented that "we are taking no chances. That number should take care of any conceivable contingency."

Among the misrepresentations the plaintiffs claim were made in connection with the circulation of the petition were:

That it would help the "Scottsboro boys"; that it would take mechanical loaders out of the mine; to help the colored race; to demand a third term for President Roosevelt; to obtain free textbooks and to "better school conditions that my children would not have to sit on hard benches."

The complaint specifically charged Oscar Wheeler with representing variously that the petition advocated an old age pension plan and the candidacy of a negro for vice-president, a third term for President Roosevelt, good roads and better conditions.

Oakland Is Named As Site of First Meeting Aug. 12

Lewis Jones Elected Temporary Chairman; Committees Appointed

OAKLAND, July 29 — A meeting which has for its purpose the formation of a permanent organization of Young Republicans is being looked forward to here in Oakland. The meeting is called for Monday evening, August 12, in the city hall here.

Displaying earnestness of purpose rather than a temporary display of enthusiasm, about twenty-five young members of the Republican party met last week to lay the groundwork for the organization.

Expansion Plans

Although the meeting is called for Oakland and immediate vicinity, the plan is to expand the organization throughout the county with a number of unit organizations in the various towns and communities.

The meeting was called by Julius C. Renninger, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, who stated quite a number of people appeared interested in such an organization. He explained that its membership could aid materially in increasing the majority for Republican candidates in this county.

A comparison of election figures taken from the official returns showed that in 1936 and 1932 the Republican majority for presidential candidates had been just 805 and 816, while the three terms prior to that the majorities had been 3,203, 1,368 and 1,735. In 1916 Hughes carried the county against Wilson by only 777.

Hope To Up Majority

With Republicans having a majority of 2,698 in this county (5744 compared to 3046 Democrats registered) it was pointed out that with an active Republican group at work assisting the Republican committee, there was no reason that there could not be a majority this year reaching at least 3,500, especially with the tendency of some Democrats to swing toward Willkie because of their opposition to Roosevelt's attempt to win a third term.

The group organized temporarily by electing Lewis Jones, temporary chairman. Other officers named temporarily were Mrs. William Naylor, first vice-chairman; Robert Lawton, second vice-chairman; Mrs. Julius Renninger, secretary; and George H. Hanst, treasurer.

Committees Named

Mr. Jones named a constitution committee consisting of Julius C. Renninger, Paul McIntire and Irvin Feld; an entertainment committee including Robert Lawton, Clayton Winters, Mrs. Hugh Echard, Miss Helen Schlossnagle, Mrs. Lewis Jones; a publicity committee consisting of George Hanst, Miss Coral McRobie, Leonard Hath-

Plans are being made here to celebrate National Aviation Day, which will be proclaimed by President Roosevelt for August 19. The celebration has been tentatively set for Saturday, August 17, at Welton field, and passenger flights will be made from the field. The event will be sponsored by the Moorefield Lions club.

An attempt is being made to secure as speakers for the program Congressman Jennings Randolph, who was the author of the bill to make National Aviation Day an annual event.

Twelve have tentatively signified their intentions of taking the course to secure their permit to fly under a licensed instructor.

Oakland Is Named As Site of First Meeting Aug. 12

Lewis Jones Elected Temporary Chairman; Committees Appointed

OAKLAND, July 29 — A meeting which has for its purpose the formation of a permanent organization of Young Republicans is being looked forward to here in Oakland. The meeting is called for Monday evening, August 12, in the city hall here.

Displaying earnestness of purpose rather than a temporary display of enthusiasm, about twenty-five young members of the Republican party met last week to lay the groundwork for the organization.

Expansion Plans

Although the meeting is called for Oakland and immediate vicinity, the plan is to expand the organization throughout the county with a number of unit organizations in the various towns and communities.

The meeting was called by Julius C. Renninger, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, who stated quite a number of people appeared interested in such an organization. He explained that its membership could aid materially in increasing the majority for Republican candidates in this county.

A comparison of election figures taken from the official returns showed that in 1936 and 1932 the Republican majority for presidential candidates had been just 805 and 816, while the three terms prior to that the majorities had been 3,203, 1,368 and 1,735. In 1916 Hughes carried the county against Wilson by only 777.

Hope To Up Majority

With Republicans having a majority of 2,698 in this county (5744 compared to 3046 Democrats registered) it was pointed out that with an active Republican group at work assisting the Republican committee, there was no reason that there could not be a majority this year reaching at least 3,500, especially with the tendency of some Democrats to swing toward Willkie because of their opposition to Roosevelt's attempt to win a third term.

The group organized temporarily by electing Lewis Jones, temporary chairman. Other officers named temporarily were Mrs. William Naylor, first vice-chairman; Robert Lawton, second vice-chairman; Mrs. Julius Renninger, secretary; and George H. Hanst, treasurer.

Committees Named

Mr. Jones named a constitution committee consisting of Julius C. Renninger, Paul McIntire and Irvin Feld; an entertainment committee including Robert Lawton, Clayton Winters, Mrs. Hugh Echard, Miss Helen Schlossnagle, Mrs. Lewis Jones; a publicity committee consisting of George Hanst, Miss Coral McRobie, Leonard Hath-

Hit-Run Victim Buried as Police Continue Probe

Clues Found at Scene May Lead to Arrest of Death Car Driver

MEYERSDALE, Pa., July 29—Funeral services for John Domer were conducted here this afternoon as State Police reported no new development in their search for the car which caused his death.

Domer, about 60 and well known here, was killed by a hit-run driver Friday night on Route 219, four miles south of here.

Although reporting no progress toward identifying and arresting the driver authorities were hopeful that several clues found at the scene might give them a lead on which to work.

Police are examining a portion of a V-8 monogram and a piece of metal from the radiator, apparently broken off the death car when it struck Domer. From these parts they have determined that the hit-run car was 1935 Ford.

Investigators reported, too, that the driver or an occupant of the vehicle had apparently "planted" a whiskey bottle near Domer's body, possibly in an effort to make it appear he was at fault. The bottle, which carried a state liquor control board stamp and on which the seal had not been broken, might have been thrown near the body after the crash, it was stated.

Domer definately had not been drinking, it was said, and friends here declared he was a total abstainer and an ardent foe of the liquor traffic.

The car that struck him must have been traveling fast, it was pointed out. Domer's body being hurled 100 feet.

The funeral rites were conducted at the Price funeral chapel, Main street, by the Rev. H. Carl Buterbaugh, pastor of the Methodist church. The burial service at Union cemetery was in charge of H. C. McKinley Camp 214, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, of which Domer was a member.

Only immediate survivor is a sister, Miss Marion Domer, a Charleston, W. Va., school teacher.

Domer was employed as a brakeman on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad until he suffered a stroke of apoplexy several years ago.

A.M.A. To Stress Industrial Health As Factor in National Defense

County Committees Planned, Doctors from Two Virginias Hear

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 29 (AP) — The American Medical Association will stress industrial health on the theory that skilled workers are as essential to national defense as men under arms, doctors of the two Virginias were told today.

Dr. C. M. Peterson of the industrial health division of the national body, said the AMA proposes to set up industrial health committees in every county medical society — wherever industrialization warrants —to facilitate the plan.

"Higher standards of medical service in industry must be achieved," Peterson said in an address to a joint session of the West Virginia State Medical Association and the Virginia Medical Society.

Pointing out that the skilled worker's indispensability increases as replacement becomes difficult or impossible, Peterson declared the "medical profession is much better prepared now than twenty-five years ago to shoulder increased burdens of maintaining high health standards in industry in national defense preparations."

He said the proposed county committees would coordinate a program that would include clarification of relationships between industrial and private practioners, establish working relationships with state agencies interested in industrial health, and elevate medical standards under workmen's compensation.

The House of Delegates of the West Virginia group, meeting separately while Virginia members held technical discussions, adopted a resolution opposing a proposed motion picture depicting Dr. W. T. G. Morton of Boston as the founder of ether for surgical anaesthesia.

The resolution, offered by Dr. Walter Vest of Huntington, and addressed to Paramount Films Corporation, "requests that you refrain" from filming the proposed picture on the ground that "the true facts are that Dr. Crawford W. Long first found and used ether as an anaesthetic in Georgia in 1842."

The resolution asserted that "this fact has been recognized by several associations and agencies, not the least of which was the issuance of a special postage stamp by the government in commemmoration of Dr. Long's work."

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Hit-Run Victim Buried as Police Continue Probe

Clues Found at Scene May Lead to Arrest of Death Car Driver

MEYERSDALE, Pa., July 29—Funeral services for John Domer were conducted here this afternoon as State Police reported no new development in their search for the car which caused his death.

Domer, about 60 and well known here, was killed by a hit-run driver Friday night on Route 219, four miles south of here.

Although reporting no progress toward identifying and arresting the driver, authorities were hopeful that several clues found at the scene might give them a lead on which to work.

Police are examining a portion of a V-8 monogram and a piece of metal from the radiator, apparently broken off the death car when it struck Domer. From these parts they have determined that the hit-run car was 1935 Ford.

Investigators reported, too, that the driver or an occupant of the vehicle had apparently "planted" a whiskey bottle near Domer's body, possibly in an effort to make it appear he was at fault. The bottle, which carried a state liquor control board stamp and on which the seal had not been broken, might have been thrown near the body after the crash, it was stated.

Domer definately had not been drinking, it was said, and friends here declared he was a total abstainer and an ardent foe of the liquor traffic.

The car that struck him must have been traveling fast, it was pointed out. Domer's body being hurled 100 feet.

The funeral rites were conducted at the Price funeral chapel, Main street, by the Rev. H. Carl Buterbaugh, pastor of the Methodist church. The burial service at Union cemetery was in charge of H. C. McKinley Camp 214, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, of which Domer was a member.

Only immediate survivor is a sister, Miss Marion Domer, a Charleston, W. Va., school teacher.

Domer was employed as a brakeman on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad until he suffered a stroke of apoplexy several years ago.

Playground Project

Charles E. Kelly Post 112, American Legion, has assumed the sponsorship of a WPA recreational project for the development of the community playground, an ideally located plot of ground at the foot of Main street, and will endeavor to make the ground more useful for youthful activities by the outlining of recreational programs and the installation of equipment necessary to carry out these programs.

Already the baseball diamond has been placed in condition, an area has been cleared and courts erected for volley ball, together with pits for horseshoe pitching. Artha Shumaker has been designated as recreational director, and this morning Mrs. Hazel Wilmoth, who had been one of the instructors at the playgrounds in Somerset, started a program of activities.

A.M.A. To Stress Industrial Health As Factor in National Defense

County Committees Planned, Doctors from Two Virginias Hear

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 29 (AP) — The American Medical Association will stress industrial health on the theory that skilled workers are as essential to national defense as men under arms, doctors of the two Virginias were told today.

Dr. C. M. Peterson of the industrial health division of the national body, said the AMA proposes to set up industrial health committees in every county medical society — wherever industrialization warrants —to facilitate the plan.

"Higher standards of medical service in industry must be achieved," Peterson said in an address to a joint session of the West Virginia State Medical Association and the Virginia Medical Society.

Pointing out that the skilled worker's indispensability increases as replacement becomes difficult or impossible, Peterson declared the "medical profession is much better prepared now than twenty-five years ago to shoulder increased burdens of maintaining high health standards in industry in national defense preparations."

He said the proposed county committees would coordinate a program that would include clarification of relationships between industrial and private practioners, establish working relationships with state agencies interested in industrial health, and elevate medical standards under workmen's compensation.

The House of Delegates of the West Virginia group, meeting separately while Virginia members held technical discussions, adopted a resolution opposing a proposed motion picture depicting Dr. W. T. G. Morton of Boston as the founder of ether for surgical anaesthesia.

The resolution, offered by Dr. Walter Vest of Huntington, and addressed to Paramount Films Corporation, "requests that you refrain" from filming the proposed picture on the ground that "the true facts are that Dr. Crawford W. Long first found and used ether as an anaesthetic in Georgia in 1842."

The resolution asserted that "this fact has been recognized by several associations and agencies, not the least of which was the issuance of a special postage stamp by the government in commemmoration of Dr. Long's work."

Workmen Busy on Foundation for Carnation Receiving Station

OAKLAND, July 29—Work on the foundation for the new milk receiving station of the Carnation Milk Company is progressing this week, following breaking of ground early last week. When completed the plant will provide an outlet for milk produced by farmers of Garrett county, Somerset county, Pa., and Preston county, W. Va.

R. O. Henzey is the architect in charge, H. E. Pierce is superintendent of construction, while F. W. Clark is construction engineer. Plans call for the Oakland plant to ship its milk, after cooling, to the Clarksburg condensery. The amount of milk which the company will accept is unlimited, Vern P. Melhuish, company representative, told farmers and business men here.

The plant is being erected on property recently purchased from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and is a part of the old Oakland hotel grounds just west of town on the Crellin road. Five acres of land were purchased, and the mayor and town council granted the firm minimum taxes for a ten-year period.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Selective Stock Market Rally Lifts Favorites One to Two Points

Steels and Motors Lead Selective List to Higher Ground

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, July 29 (AP)—A better than expected unturn in this week's steel mill operations estimate apparently touched off a selective stock market rally today that lifted favorites 1 to 2 points and a few as much as 4.

Steels and motors led the foray after a morning of aimless wandering. The forward flurry was comparatively brief, but moderately active while it lasted. There was a subsequent price letdown, then another advance near the close. Most leaders finished at or near the top.

The Associated Press average of sixty issues held net improvement of .2 of a point at 47.7, best upswing since July 16. Volume of 255,990 shares contrasted with 272,810 last Friday.

Steel production for the current week was placed at 90.4 per cent of capacity, up 2.2 points at a peak level since last December. Detroit observers saw cheering prospects for the automobile makers.

Among stocks, Chrysler jumped four pointe and ended up 3½. Well in front were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Great Northern, Southern Railway, Crown Cork, Consolidated Edison, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott and J. C. Penney.

Dow Chemical dropped three. Slightly lower were Standard Oil of N. J., Texas Corp., Boeing, American Telephone and others.

Tilting moderately upward in the Curb were Jones & Laughlin, Brewster Aero, Cities Service, International Petroleum and St. Regis Paper. The turnover here was around 68,000 in the previous full session.

Milk Producers May Ask Federal Setup

MOUNT AIRY, Md., July 29 (AP) — Some milk producers in this area — a part of the Baltimore shed — are considering asking for a federal marketing setup such as prevails among shippers marketing in Washington, D. C.

There was no indication, however, of what the consensus was among local farmers.

Proponents of the federal marketing regulations argue present prices paid in this area are low, and higher prices could possibly be obtained under federal regulations.

Local shippers were told by O. M. Reed, acting chief, dairy division of the Department of Agriculture that "the order for the Washington area was issued after producers had testified at a public hearing that the institution of the order was necessary to assist them in obtaining a uniform price for milk of the same quality and use.

Use of plastics in manufacture has been extended to musical instruments.

Some People Like Hot Weather More Than They Do Cold

They Are Calophiles While Others Are Classed as Calophopes

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In 1904, a physician named Dexter wrote a book, now out of print, which recorded the results of his studies to show the relationship between the weather and human activities. He had charts showing the preponderance of suicides and murders, in certain kinds of weather. In the Bank of England it was found that during very foggy weather certain types of clerical work showed such a high percentage of errors that such work was stopped during these periods and the books locked up to avoid mistakes.

People certainly differ in their recations to hot weather—there are calophiles and calophobes. Personally I am calophobe—I hate hot weather and simply cannot function or work then in spite of the fact that I spent forty summers of my life in about the hottest part of the United States. I do my work now in a cool summer climate and glory to get back to snow and zero weather in the winter. Many of my friends on the contrary say they feel best in temperatures over ninety and plan their vacations in the winter. They always seem to me to be expressing bravdo; I don't see how they can even be cheerful, let alone work, in hot weather,—but that is my point of view.

Effect of Weather

This question of weather temperament has significance in dealing with your fellow man. Hitler is definitely cyclic as regards weather. In a chart of dates published in Time (June 24) it is noticeable that he was always inactive in February, June, July, October and November and December. This year he couldn't help himself in June and July; his events pushed him. March, August and September are his busy months for decisions. That isn't astrology—that's weather and psychology.

During the hot weather, the wonderful machinery of perspiration should be studied and admired. Annoying as it may be it is the thermostat of our bodies.

Perspiration is secreted from the sweat glands, minute coiled glands which lie in deeper layers of the skin, each one surrounded by a network of blood vessels. The sweat comes from the blood consists mostly of water and salt, but may contain many other substances. Perspiration, aided by the natural oil from the sebaceous glands keeps the skin pliable, soft and moist. Even in cool weather the body produces a quart of perspiration in twenty-four hours.

Nature's Cooling Device

The sweat glands are most numerous where the temperature buds of the nerves are most numerous. Very few around the knees and thighs, for instance, which are not sensitive to cold or heat. The exposed parts of the body produce the most sweat, the armpits seem to produce more because the skin areas are in contact here and evaporation is limited.

Evaporation is Nature's most efficient cooling device, that's why perspiration is such an efficient temperature regulator. Humidity and air currents condition this efficiency. Humidity in our average summer temperatures is 40 to 60, and this conduces to free evaporation. In dry desert climates, even with the temperature above 110 perspiration evaporates so rapidly that you are actually chilly.

Questions and Answers

Reader—"I would appreciate a diet for yellowing of the skin. I would like to know if pure olive oil used as a dressing for different foods is all right to take. With the yellowing of the skin there is also constant constipation."

Answer—Olive oil is a perfectly good food under these circumstances and will not do you any harm; It is quite possible that you are taking some kind of a cathartic which produces a change in your blood and makes your skin yellow. Constipation itself does not produce yellowing of the skin, popular belief to the contrary notwithstanding.

Swims Three Days To Set New Record

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo. July 29 (AP)—After being in the water for more than three days, John V. Sigmund, St. Louis butcher, has set what was believed to be a long distance record by completing a nonstop swim of approximatedy 292 miles down the Mississippi river.

The 30-year-old swimmer reached his objective—the foot of Ward avenue here—at 1:10 p. m., eighty-nine hours and forty-eight minutes after entering the river at St. Louis at 7:22 p. m. last Wednesday.

Unable to walk or talk, he was helped from the water to a boathouse where he rested a short time until a stretcher was improvised to carry him to a hotel.

Speed Loading of Iron for Japan

PORTLAND, Ore., July 29 (AP) — Scrap iron for Japan was loaded at a brisk pace today as crews sought to beat the Aug. 1 deadline for the free export of top grade scrap as defined by presidential decree.

Some 25,000 tons of scrap was available at this port.

The Panamanian freighter San Rafael stowed the last of her cargo and prepared to leave shortly. The American-owned Kentucky and the Japanese Nanman Maru are loading night and day, each listed for 8,000 tons. About 1,000 tons can be loaded in twenty-four hours.

Due tonight was the American mail line freighter West Cusseta to take about 3,000 tons. Shippers expect her to clear for Japan before Wednesday midnight.

The continent of Australia is about the size of the United States.

Selective Stock Market Rally Lifts Favorites One to Two Points

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, July 29 (AP)—A better than expected unturn in this week's steel mill operations estimate apparently touched off a selective stock market rally today that lifted favorites 1 to 2 points and a few as much as 4.

Steels and motors led the foray after a morning of aimless wandering. The forward flurry was comparatively brief, but moderately active while it lasted. There was a subsequent price letdown, then another advance near the close. Most leaders finished at or near the top.

The Associated Press average of sixty issues held net improvement of .2 of a point at 47.7, best upswing since July 16. Volume of 255,990 shares contrasted with 272,810 last Friday.

Steel production for the current week was placed at 90.4 per cent of capacity, up 2.2 points at a peak level since last December. Detroit observers saw cheering prospects for the automobile makers.

Among stocks, Chrysler jumped four points and ended up 3½. Well in front were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Great Northern, Southern Railway, Crown Cork, Consolidated Edison, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott and J. C. Penney.

Dow Chemical dropped three. Slightly lower were Standard Oil of N. J., Texas Corp., Boeing, American Telephone and others.

Tilting moderately upward in the Curb were Jones & Laughlin, Brewster Aero, Cities Service, International Petroleum and St. Regis Paper. The turnover here was around 68,000 in the previous full session.

Benny Inocencio Has Part in Garden Film

Bing Crosby, who had the title role in "The Star Maker," is living up to it by helping many young players on their way to screen fame. One of the latest to benefit from appearing with Bing is Benny Inocencio, eleven-year-old South Sea island native who is seen with him in "Road to Singapore," the Paramount film in which Bing works with Dorothy Lamour and Bob Hope. "Road to Singapore" tells how Hope and Bing, women haters, journey to the South Seas only to fall in love with Dorothy Lamour. The film is now at the Garden theater.

"Parole Fixer," the Paramount picture based on J. Edgar Hoover's "Persons in Hiding," and now at the Garden theater, marks the return to the American screen of Gertrude Michael, long a favorite in crime drama, in the role of a girl who flaunts the law. Milk Producers May Ask Federal Setup

MOUNT AIRY, Md., July 29 (AP) — Some milk producers in this area — a part of the Baltimore shed — are considering asking for a federal marketing setup such as prevails among shippers marketing in Washington, D. C.

There was no indication, however, of what the consensus was among local farmers.

Proponents of the federal marketing regulations argue present prices paid in this area are low, and higher prices could possibly be obtained under federal regulations.

Local shippers were told by O. M. Reed, acting chief, dairy division of the Department of Agriculture that "the order for the Washington area was issued after producers had testified at a public hearing that the institution of the order was necessary to assist them in obtaining a uniform price for milk of the same quality and use.

Use of plastics in manufacture has been extended to musical instruments.

Beulah Bondi, as Mrs. Webb, and Guy Kibbee, as Editor Webb, discuss the serious side of life while preparing for breakfast during the action of Sol Lesser's film version of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," which will open at the Maryland theater on Thursday through United Artists release.

Some People Like Hot Weather More Than They Do Cold

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In 1904, a physician named Dexter wrote a book, now out of print, which recorded the results of his studies to show the relationship between the weather and human activities. He had charts showing the preponderance of suicides and murders, in certain kinds of weather. In the Bank of England it was found that during very foggy weather certain types of clerical work showed such a high percentage of errors that such work was stopped during these periods and the books locked up to avoid mistakes.

People certainly differ in their recations to hot weather—there are calophiles and calophobes. Personally I am calophobe—I hate hot weather and simply cannot function or work then in spite of the fact that I spent forty summers of my life in about the hottest part of the United States. I do my work now in a cool summer climate and glory to get back to snow and zero weather in the winter. Many of my friends on the contrary say they feel best in temperatures over ninety and plan their vacations in the winter. They always seem to me to be expressing bravdo; I don't see how they can even be cheerful, let alone work, in hot weather,—but that is my point of view.

Effect of Weather

This question of weather temperament has significance in dealing with your fellow man. Hitler is definitely cyclic as regards weather. In a chart of dates published in Time (June 24) it is noticeable that he was always inactive in February, June, July, October and November and December. This year he couldn't help himself in June and July; his events pushed him. March, August and September are his busy months for decisions. That isn't astrology—that's weather and psychology.

During the hot weather, the wonderful machinery of perspiration should be studied and admired. Annoying as it may be it is the thermostat of our bodies.

Perspiration is secreted from the sweat glands, minute coiled glands which lie in deeper layers of the skin, each one surrounded by a network of blood vessels. The sweat comes from the blood, consists mostly of water and salt, but may contain many other substances. Perspiration, aided by the natural oil from the sebaceous glands keeps the skin pliable, soft and moist. Even in cool weather the body produces a quart of perspiration in twenty-four hours.

Nature's Cooling Device

The sweat glands are most numerous where the temperature buds of the nerves are most numerous. Very few around the knees and thighs, for instance, which are not sensitive to cold or heat. The exposed parts of the body produce the most sweat, the armpits seem to produce more because the skin areas are in contact here and evaporation is limited.

Evaporation is Nature's most efficient cooling device, that's why perspiration is such an efficient temperature regulator. Humidity and air currents condition this efficiency. Humidity in our average summer temperatures is 40 to 60, and this conduces to free evaporation. In dry desert climates, even with the temperature above 110 perspiration evaporates so rapidly that you are actually chilly.

Questions and Answers

Reader—"I would appreciate a diet for yellowing of the skin. I would like to know if pure olive oil used as a dressing for different foods is all right to take. With the yellowing of the skin there is also constant constipation."

Answer—Olive oil is a perfectly good food under these circumstances and will not do you any harm; It is quite possible that you are taking some kind of a cathartic which produces a change in your blood and makes your skin yellow. Constipation itself does not produce yellowing of the skin, popular belief to the contrary notwithstanding.

Swims Three Days To Set New Record

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., July 29 (AP)—After being in the water for more than three days, John V. Sigmund, St. Louis butcher, has set what was believed to be a long distance record by completing a non-stop swim of approximatedy 292 miles down the Mississippi river.

The 30-year-old swimmer reached his objective—the foot of Ward avenue here—at 1:10 p. m., eighty-nine hours and forty-eight minutes after entering the river at St. Louis at 7:22 p. m. last Wednesday.

Unable to walk or talk, he was helped from the water to a boathouse where he rested a short time until a stretcher was improvised to carry him to a hotel.

Speed Loading of Iron for Japan

PORTLAND, Ore., July 29 (AP) — Scrap iron for Japan was loaded at a brisk pace today as crews sought to beat the Aug. 1 deadline for the free export of top grade scrap as defined by presidential decree.

Some 25,000 tons of scrap was available at this port.

The Panamanian freighter San Rafael stowed the last of her cargo and prepared to leave shortly. The American-owned Kentucky and the Japanese Nanman Maru are loading night and day, each listed for 8,000 tons. About 1,000 tons can be loaded in twenty-four hours.

Due tonight was the American mail line freighter West Cusseta to take about 3,000 tons. Shippers expect her to clear for Japan before Wednesday midnight.

The continent of Australia is about the size of the United States.

Pirates on Dodgers' List of Foes with Fists

Brooklyn Wins 7-6 As Vaughan and Phelps Pass Pokes

Tangle after Pirates' Tied Up Score with Six in Ninth

Coscarart's Single with Two on Winds Up Frolic in Flatbush

BROOKLYN, July 29 (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers extended their string of feuds today to include the Pittsburgh Pirates and for the first time this season won a game in which they had a fight.

Pete Coscarart's single with two on and the score tied in the ninth brought Brooklyn a 7 to 6 victory.

It was an uneven game, packed with good baseball and bad, as well as plenty of extra-curricular activity.

For eight innings Curt Davis held the Pirates helpless and scoreless on four hits while his teammates built up a six-run advantage for him. But in the ninth the Pirates sent ten men to bat and came up with six hits and six runs to deadlock the count.

Manager Frank Frisch was banished from the game in the sixth inning for protesting a play at second base. It was the sixth time this season he had been chased.

Then in the last half of the ninth shortstop Arky Vaughan of the Pirates and catcher Babe Phelps of the Dodgers tangled in a fist fight at first base and both were expelled.

BY JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, July 29 —You have to rise very early in the morning (Italian daylight savings time) to get ahead of Benito Mussolini, Italy's lovable duce.

Not long ago I remarked on the scarcity of tennis players in downtown and suburban Italy, and suggested that when the time came for Germany and Italy to play for the axis cup, donated by Cornelius J. Axis to replace the Davis Cup, Hitler would stampede the duce with a mixed squad of French, Belgian, Czech, Polish, Dutch and Norwegian tennis players, all of them recently signed at the point of a gun by Nazi scouts.

On the face of it, Italy had nothing to match this all - Anschluss team. Pickings have been lean for the duce. Ethiopia yielded only one tennis player, and he got away one night while his guards were deep in a game of morra for toothpicks. After whacking the bushes of Albania for several months, the scouts were obliged to report home with nothing to show for their work except one free-style sculler and a couple of horseshoe pitchers.

Choosing his countries carefully, Hitler had cornered the tennis market. The duce appeared, as usual, to be holding the bag.

But you cannot keep a good duce down. This week, on the eve of competition for the axis cup, it develops that Italy has secretly been nursing and preparing a tennis player second to none, a combination Budge-Tilden-Vines, and what is more, a pure, homespun product, who will make Hitler look pretty silly with his ballot - box stuffing and his anschluss ringers.

This secret player is none other than the duce himself. They have taken the wraps off him, and Germany is thinking of postponing the axis cup matches till Hitler can get in shape to swing a racket.

Foiled in Ethiopia and Albania, the Duce realized that the best way to get a thing done is to do it yourself. He has been in training for some time now. The critics say he is sure-fire.

I refer, of course, to the Italian critics, who can be relied on for a cool fair-minded appraisal of Mussolini's tennis. These boys have been around. They know a good thing when they see it. If they don't they look for jobs somewhere else.

The Duce took his first public workout in the presence of a number of foreign critics, who were rounded up by a posse and ladled into ringside seats at the practice court. The Duce and three stooges then played a fast set of doubles. Under article 3, section III of the constitution, the Duce won.

There were Nazi critics in the grandstand, and they trembled in their boots at the sight of the Duce's Texas League backhand and his fiery underhand service. The Duce noticed this, and chuckled.

"It don't look so good for you boys now, eh!" he said.

"It sure don't, Duce," agreed the Nazi critics.

Some experts are inclined to disparage Mussolini's game on the ground that he serves underhand. Let them remember that this type of service was good enough for Miss Betty Nuthall, who was quite a girl.

"The Duce serves with the skill of an eagle," says Gayda, in the News-Bee.

"He volleys like a deer," says Gayda, in the Clarion.

"Some player," exults Gayda, in the Early Racing Form.

Weighing the evidence, it certainly looks as though Italy has come up with the tennis player of the generation. As Gayda says how can anyone beat him? It ain't constitutional. Thirty days or thirty lire.

Buddy Baer under Treatment; Ring Career Is Ended

Spinal Injury May Cause Paralysis of Legs, Doctors Fear

SACRAMENTO, Calif., July 29 (AP) —Future fighting plans for Buddy Baer were set aside today as physicians continued treatment of a spinal injury which they hope will prevent paralysis of the young boxer's legs.

Dr. June B. Harris said Buddy was suffering from lumbo-sacral strain. He received the injury while training for his fight with Nathan Mann in New York last Spring.

The physician said Baer would have to undergo treatments for an "indefinite" period of time.

East Side League Opens With Second Half Upset

The results of the first half of the East Side Softball League's play finds Hick's Aces the winner by a large margin. Second place winner, The Senators, were pressed hard by the Corner Merchants and Crystal Park. Smith's Grocery, after a slow start, is coming along nicely and should be some real competition this second half. All the teams have their sights lined on Hick's Aces and the Second Half race should be a close one.

Senators	9	6	.600
Merchants	8	7	.533

In games yesterday Bill Leake's Senators started the second half by breaking the 15-game winning streak of the Hick's Aces, undefeated first half champs, 11 to 4. The pitching of Barncord and the catching of Becker featured. Arnone led the assault with three for three.

The Corner Merchants defeated the Potomac News, new league entry, 8 to 7 in yesterday's other league game. Norris of the Merchants brought in the winning run with a single. Cotter and Trexler each had homers for the winners, while Trexler and Davis also had doubles.

Troutman and Ogle had two-baggers for the Newsies, who were limited to eight hits by Day. Denhart gave up nine to suffer his close setback.

The SPORT TRAIL

BY WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, July 29 (AP)—The pretty village of Goshen, nestling in the foothills of the Catskills, is arousing from a mid-summer lethargy these days, its alarm clock the approach of that glorious day when, for a few fleeting hours, it will shimmer in the nation's sports spotlight.

The day is Hambletonian day—Aug. 14 this year—and for the first time since 1934 the old, tradition-bound harness horse men are unable to point a gnarled finger at one of the 47 eligibles and say with finality: "There is the winner."

It will be the tenth renewal at Goshen of the event, which is expected to carry a $42,000 purse, and the upwards of 30,000 spectators who will crowd Good Time Park can expect about 10 of the present 47 eligibles to go to the post, with at least four of the 10 in the favorite class.

The four outstanding three-year old trotters are Kuno, owned by the jinx-pursued Dunbar Bostwick; Milestone, owned by Joseph Neville of Delaware, Ohio; Spencer Scott, entered by C. W. Phellis of Greenwich, Conn., and Remus, with more owners than a fighter. Remus is entered by Harry Short of Columbus, Ohio, but Paul Bowser and Billy Dickerson also have a piece of the horse.

Kuno was the winter book favorite, rated on its performance as a two-year-old. Kuno had the best time—2:04¼ in the Kentucky Futurity—last year, and seemed to be a cinch to be a prohibitive favorite when the Hambletonian rolled around.

However, the Bostwick trotter was off to a poor start this year and lost prestige. He only recently won his first race after Spencer Scott had taken two previous events. Spencer Scott emerged into the favorite class on his performances.

* * *

Milestone is rated a definite dark horse. He finished third, behind Kuno and Spencer Scott, in the Kentucky Futurity last year, despite the fact he had done almost all of its earlier trotting on half-mile tracks. The real eye-opener as to his ability, however, came when he was timed in :58.2 in a half-mile event at Indianapolis this year.

Remus probably is the most consistent of the four horses. The big colt—he stands 17 hands two and Short thinks he still is growing—finished second in his first three starts this year, winning a heat in the stallion stake at Indianapolis as Spencer Scott took the race.

There is no tradition connected with the fate of favorites in the Hambletonian. They have split about 50-50 in winning and losing since the race was inaugurated in 1926. Last year Peter Astra, loser of only one heat all year, was the favorite, and won. The year before Long Key was top choice, but McLin Hanover won.

* * *

There will be three innovations in the running of the Hambletonian this year—the photo finish, the pari-mutuels and the barrier. There is no objection to the photo finish and the pari-mutuels, but the hard-shelled old harness men, steeped in tradition and considering what was good enough 50 years ago as good enough today, bitterly assail the barrier.

They claim that the device will eliminate any chance of a record, as the 70 feet between the barrier and starting line is not enough to permit the trotters to get in proper stride.

They have reluctantly bowed to the modern touch, but their sentiment toward tradition remains unchanged, even as the drowsing hamlet of Goshen remains unchanged through the years.

Detroit Takes It On Chin 9-7 from Macks' Jinx Team

Freddie Hutchinson Goes Sour and Benton Is No Sugar

DETROIT, July 29 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers took it on the chin again today, dropping a 9 to 7 decision to their jinx, the Philadelphia Athletics, to cut their American league lead to one game.

Freddie Hutchinson, the $70,000 investment who was recalled recently from the minors, started on the mound for the Tigers and for four innings had the A's eating out of his hand.

Then he lost his cunning and the Athletics jumped on him for four runs in the fifth. They shelled him from the hill in the seventh, in which they tallied five more runs, and even fireman Al Benton couldn't do anything about it.

Hutchinson's teammates gave him a three-run lead in the first when Rudy York slammed his sixteenth homer of the season with two aboard and regained it in the fifth when Hank Greenberg belted a round-tripper into the uppper deck of the left field stands with one on base.

Ten A's went to bat in the seventh but Hutchison was relieved after filling the bases with none out on Al Brancato's single, Nelson Potter's double, and a walk to Al Rubeling.

Benton, usually effective in relief roles, was sour this time, and, when the inning was over, the Athletics had scored five runs and won the ball game.

Bob Feller Is "News" As Vitt Sings Blues

The tooth was cracked last week when a sandlot rookie accidentally hit the young moundsman with a thrown ball during pre-game practice. The ball struck Feller on the cheek.

Feller's dentist administered gas, pulled the molar and announced his patient would be ready for his scheduled turn against the Boston Red Sox in Cleveland stadium tomorrow night. Bob will seek his 17th victory.

Burley Beats Abrams

PITTSBURGH, July 29 (AP) — Charley Burley, 156, Pittsburgh negro, and Georgie Abrams, 161, Washington, fought to a draw in ten rounds tonight, the negro's heavier and cleaner punching being offset in part by his loss of the first two rounds because of low hitting.

Mike Raffa, 128, of Newell, W. Va., a promising young featherweight, won his 19th straight victory by knocking out Sammy Crocetti, 129, of New York, with a left hook in the second of their scheduled eight round fight.

Tommy Yarosz, 148, of Monaca, Pa., young brother of the former middleweight champion, Teddy Yarosz, easily outpointed Joe Pohaskey, 150, of McKees Rocks, Pa., in a six-round preliminary.

The Pitchers Decide

No matter how you figure it, in the final analysis the pitchers decide the pennant races. That is so obvious that no one ever should be confused about it. But it happens that once in a while—generally in the spring—there is some confusion on that point. It seems at that time that all that counts in baseball is power and that if a team can send a string of sluggers up to the plate its pitching doesn't matter.

It only seems that way, however. The real answers begin to come in along about this time of the season. In the American League the Tigers are up there because they have the best balance of punch and pitching in the league, and the Indians are close behind them mainly because of their pitching. The Red Sox and the Yankees can hit but their pitching has foundered.

In the National League the Dodgers and the Reds were head and head for a long while. Now the Reds are far out in front and the Dodgers are screaming for help. The gap between them was fashioned by the Reds' pitchers—and the Dodgers are pulling hurlers up from the minor leagues in an effort to hold themselves together.

Meanwhile, the Cardinals are in fifth place—and remember that in the spring they were rated as the chief menace of the Reds—and were picked by many to win the pennant? There was no disillusionment then about the quality of the Cardinal pitching. But the dope was that even if it just picked up a little bit, Medwick—then in a Cardinal uniform—and Mize and Slaughter and Padgett and Martin and the rest of that mauling crew would batter down the enemy. Well, they're all there still, except Medwick and Joe's passing to the Dodgers didn't weaken the Cards. But they're in fifth place because they can't get the pitching.

Case of the Yankees

Lots of things have happened to the Yankees since they opened the season heavily backed to win a fifth pennant in a row. Joe DiMaggio was hurt and out of the line-up for a while. Bill Dickey and Joe Gordan faltered. Until recently the famed attack couldn't function with consistency.

But the main fault was the pitching. Charlie Ruffing and Vernon Gomez waned and the youngsters, Bruer and Russo, didn't move up to take their places. In a spot like that, Pearson and Hadley and Hildebrand weren't strong enough to carry the burden and even Johnny Murphy, most reliable of relief pitchers these last two or three years, went into a tailspin.

It was that which knocked the Yankees down. No matter how well they might hit, they couldn't have carried pitching like that. And if they are to rouse themselves and come on through August and September to win again, the pitchers will have to lead the way. On the basis of the kind of pitching they have had so far, the Yankees are exactly where they belong.

The Tigers' Outlook

Man for man—outside the box—the Tigers do not appear to be a good match for the Yankees, the Red Sox or even the Indians. York is clumsy at first base, Gehringer has slowed down at second, Bartell, spark plug of the infield, is out with injuries, Higgins at third base is shopworn—and so on. The Tigers can hit, of course. They have plenty of power.

But the main answer lies with Bobo Newsom, Tommy Bridges and Hal Newhauser. Newsom was having his best year until he suffered a broken thumb. Bridges has moved along smoothly. Newhouser has been a tremendous help. If Newsom shouldn't pick up where he left off when he was hurt—if Bridgse, no longer a youngster, should tire through the last two months of the campaign—if Newhouser, who now has a sore arm, continues to have trouble with it—the Tigers will not stay up there.

The Red Riflemen

The Reds are hot right now—hotter than they have been at any time—hotter than they were when they won the pennant last year. They are so hot that the pennant not only has been virtually conceded to them but they will be favored to win the world series, no matter which club wins in the American League.

The reason? Chiefly the pitching. In Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters they have the best pair of pitchers in either league. Swinging along with them are Gene Thompson, Lloyd Moore and the veteran Jim Turner. With that bunch to do their pitching, the Reds are slump-proof.

The Dodgers can hit, have one of the best infields in either league and plenty of hustle and fight. But their pitching has been spotty all year and their pitching has pulled them down.

The Indians have been in and out of first place most of the way. They have a pretty good punch, a fine second-base combination in Boudreau and Mack—and, above all, the pitching of Feller and Milnar and Smith.

The Red Sox have Jimmy Foxx, Doc Cramer, Dom DiMaggio, Lou Finney, Joe Cronin, Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr—and no pitching. Nobody has moved up to take the place of Old Mose Grove, who kept them from skidding last year.

Jeffra Wins over Spider Armstrong

BALTIMORE, July 29 (AP)—Harry Jeffra of Baltimore successfully defended his newly-won featheweight boxing crown tonight by punching out a decision over Spider Armstrong of Toronto in a fast and furious 15-round bout.

It was an uphill battle all the way for the Pimlico lad, but once he had slowed up the wiry challenger with a vicious overhead right that sent Armstrong sprawling to the floor in the eleventh, he had things well in hand.

Results of Other Bouts

Paul Chinn, 124, Baltimore, defeated Pee Wee Lewis, 122, Baltimore, technical knockout, third round.

Robert Bane Beats Loraine Eisenberg

Account of rain yesterday afternoon the Dingle courts were the only city courts available for the Allegany County tennis tournament players.

The most interesting match of the day was between Robert Bane and Lotaine Eisenberg, which Bane won after a hotly contested second set going to Eisenberg. The final scores were 6-2, 8-10, 6-2.

Robert King and J. W. McClure in doubles eliminated the team of J. W. Holmes and Jack Evans, 6-4, 8-10, 6-3.

Boston, July 29. (AP)—Ray Berres, Boston Bees catcher, and his childhood sweetheart, Miss Irma Ludwig, of Kenosha, Wis., were married yesterday at the Sacred Heart Church, Newton.

After the ceremony the bridegroom hurried to National League field to catch the second game of the doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates. Berres came to Boston from Pittsburgh earlier this year in the deal which sent Al Lopez to the Pirates.

Gephart Claims Jupers Forfeited Loop Clash

Yanks Are Better Bargain Now than In Walk-away Race

Hot Contest Packs in Fans Negotiator of Deal Declares

CLEVELAND, July 29 (AP)—The fourth-place New York Yankees are a better bargain to their prospective purchasers than a walk-away championship team would be.

Take the word of Smith Davis, Cleveland broker who has been negotiating purchase of the Yankees and affiliated clubs, for a reported $4,000,000, in behalf of a group including James A. Farley.

Davis explained:

"There's a hot contest for the American League pennant. The baseball public likes a contest and will pay for it."

"The attendance figures tell the story. The Yankee stadium bulged with 82,437 fans Memorial Day when New York and Boston met in a doubleheader. That's the third largest crowd in all baseball history.

Davis maintained silence concerning the identity of the prospective Yankee purchasers, but Farley has been linked reliably with the project. Counsel for the estate of Col. Jacob Ruppert, Yankee owner, recently said a deal virtually was closed.

Davis, a native Ohioan and former member of the New York Stock Exchange, was a stellar football halfback at Western Reserve University, where he studied law. He has closed many millions of dollars' worth of newspaper purchases.

City Softball Loop Meeting Tonight

The City Softball League will hold a meeting at the Central Y. M. C. A. this evening at 8 o'clock if a playoff is necessary to determin the championship, President Clif Fearer announced yesterday when the Keegan Gassers, who won the first half race, North End Merchants and Police Boys' Club are still in the running for the second half flag with closing games carded this evening.

If the Gassers finish on top again there will be no playoff, and Skipper Bill Keegan can take the rest of the week to prepare his team for the start of state title play in Baltimore this Sunday. The playoff series, if necessary, must be completed by Saturday as the state eliminations start Sunday.

President Fearer has been advised by Fred Crosby, Maryland State Softball Association commissioner that the City League runnerup team as well as the champions will be eligible to compete in state play. Participation, however, will cost the runnerup team a special entry of $2. Each team will also be permitted to sign and use one player in addition to the tossers already under contract.

Battle to Deadlock

Brooklyn Wins 7-6 As Vaughan and Phelps Pass Pokes

Coscarart's Single with Two on Winds Up Frolic in Flatbush

BROOKLYN, July 29 (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers extended their string of feuds today to include the Pittsburgh Pirates and for the first time this season won a game in which they had a fight.

Pete Coscarart's single with two on and the score tied in the ninth brought Brooklyn a 7 to 6 victory.

It was an uneven game, packed with good baseball and bad, as well as plenty of extra-curricular activity.

For eight innings Curt Davis held the Pirates helpless and scoreless on four hits while his teammates built up a six-run advantage for him. But in the ninth the Pirates sent ten men to bat and came up with six hits and six runs to deadlock the count.

Manager Frank Frisch was banished from the game in the sixth inning for protesting a play at second base. It was the sixth time this season he had been chased.

Then in the last half of the ninth shortstop Arky Vaughan of the Pirates and catcher Babe Phelps of the Dodgers tangled in a fist fight at first base and both were expelled.

BY JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, July 29 —You have to rise very early in the morning (Italian daylight savings time) to get ahead of Benito Mussolini, Italy's lovable duce.

Not long ago I remarked on the scarcity of tennis players in downtown and suburban Italy, and suggested that when the time came for Germany and Italy to play for the axis cup, donated by Cornelius J. Axis to replace the Davis Cup, Hitler would stampede the duce with a mixed squad of French, Belgian, Czech, Polish, Dutch and Norwegian tennis players, all of them recently signed at the point of a gun by Nazi scouts.

On the face of it, Italy had nothing to match this all - Anschluss team. Pickings have been lean for the duce. Ethiopia yielded only one tennis player, and he got away one night while his guards were deep in a game of morra for toothpicks. After whacking the bushes of Albania for several months, the scouts were obliged to report home with nothing to show for their work except one free-style sculler and a couple of horseshoe pitchers.

Choosing his countries carefully, Hitler had cornered the tennis market. The duce appeared, as usual, to be holding the bag.

But you cannot keep a good duce down. This week, on the eve of competition for the axis cup, it develops that Italy has secretly been nursing and preparing a tennis player second to none, a combination Budge-Tilden-Vines, and what is more, a pure, homespun product, who will make Hitler look pretty silly with his ballot - box stuffing and his anschluss ringers.

This secret player is none other than the duce himself. They have taken the wraps off him, and Germany is thinking of postponing the axis cup matches till Hitler can get in shape to swing a racket.

Poiled in Ethiopia and Albania, the Duce realized that the best way to get a thing done is to do it yourself. He has been in training for some time now. The critics say he is sure-fire.

I refer, of course, to the Italian critics, who can be relied on for a cool fair-minded appraisal of Mussolini's tennis. These boys have been around. They know a good thing when they see it. If they don't they look for jobs somewhere else.

The Duce took his first public workout in the presence of a number of foreign critics, who were rounded up by a posse and ladled into ringside seats at the practice court. The Duce and three stooges then played a fast set of doubles. Under article 3, section III of the constitution, the Duce won.

There were Nazi critics in the grandstand, and they trembled in their boots at the sight of the Duce's Texas League backhand and his fiery underhand service. The Duce noticed this, and chuckled.

"It don't look so good for you boys now, eh!" he said.

"It sure don't, Duce," agreed the Nazi critics.

Some experts are inclined to disparage Mussolini's game on the ground that he serves underhand. Let them remember that this type of service was good enough for Miss Betty Nuthall, who was quite a girl.

"Some player," exults Gayda, in the Early Racing Form.

Weighing the evidence, it certainly looks as though Italy has come up with the tennis player of the generation. As Gayda says how can anyone beat him? It ain't constitutional. Thirty days or thirty lire.

Buddy Baer under Treatment; Ring Career Is Ended

Spinal Injury May Cause Paralysis of Legs, Doctors Fear

SACRAMENTO, Calif., July 29 (AP) —Future fighting plans for Buddy Baer were set aside today as physicians continued treatment of a spinal injury which they hope will prevent paralysis of the young boxer's legs.

Dr. June B. Harris said Buddy was suffering from lumbo-sacral strain. He received the injury while training for his fight with Nathan Mann in New York last Spring.

The physician said Baer would have to undergo treatments for an "indefinite" period of time.

Second place winner, The Senators, were pressed hard by the Corner Merchants and Crystal Park. Smith's Grocery, after a slow start, is coming along nicely and should be some real competition this second half. All the teams have their sights lined on Hick's Aces and the Second Half race should be a close one.

In games yesterday Bill Leake's Senators started the second half by breaking the 15-game winning streak of the Hick's Aces, undefeated first half champs, 11 to 4. The pitching of Barncord and the catching of Becker featured. Arnone led the assault with three for three.

The Corner Merchants defeated the Potomac News, new league entry, 8 to 7 in yesterday's other league game. Norris of the Merchants brought in the winning run with a single. Cotter and Trexler each had homers for the winners, while Trexler and Davis also had doubles.

Troutman and Ogle had two-baggers for the Newsies, who were limited to eight hits by Day. Denhart gave up nine to suffer his close setback.

The SPORT TRAIL

BY WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, July 29 (AP)—The pretty village of Goshen, nestling in the foothills of the Catskills, is arousing from a mid-summer lethargy these days, its alarm clock the approach of that glorious day when, for a few fleeting hours, it will shimmer in the nation's sports spotlight.

The day is Hambletonian day—Aug. 14 this year—and for the first time since 1934 the old, tradition-bound harness horse men are unable to point a gnarled finger at one of the 47 eligibles and say with finality: "There is the winner."

It will be the tenth renewal at Goshen of the event, which is expected to carry a $42,000 purse, and the upwards of 30,000 spectators who will crowd Good Time Park can expect about 10 of the present 47 eligibles to go to the post, with at least four of the 10 in the favorite class.

The four outstanding three-year old trotters are Kuno, owned by the jinx-pursued Dunbar Bostwick; Milestone, owned by Joseph Neville of Delaware, Ohio; Spencer Scott, entered by C. W. Phellis of Greenwich, Conn., and Remus, with more owners than a fighter. Remus is entered by Harry Short of Columbus, Ohio, but Paul Bowser and Billy Dickerson also have a piece of the horse.

Kuno was the winter book favorite, rated on its performance as a two-year-old. Kuno had the best time—2:04¼ in the Kentucky Futurity—last year, and seemed to be a cinch to be a prohibitive favorite when the Hambletonian rolled around.

However, the Bostwick trotter was off to a poor start this year and lost prestige. He only recently won his first race after Spencer Scott had taken two previous events. Spencer Scott emerged into the favorite class on his performances.

* * *

Milestone is rated a definite dark horse. He finished third, behind Kuno and Spencer Scott, in the Kentucky Futurity last year, despite the fact he had done almost all of its earlier trotting on half-mile tracks. The real eye-opener as to his ability, however, came when he was timed in :58.2 in a half-mile event at Indianapolis this year.

Remus probably is the most consistent of the four horses. The big colt—he stands 17 hands two and Short thinks he still is growing—finished second in his first three starts this year, winning a heat in the stallion stake at Indianapolis as Spencer Scott took the race.

There is no tradition connected with the fate of favorites in the Hambletonian. They have split about 50-50 in winning and losing since the race was inaugurated in 1926. Last year Peter Astra, loser of only one heat all year, was the favorite, and won. The year before Long Key was top choice, but McLin Hanover won.

* * *

There will be three innovations in the running of the Hambletonian this year—the photo finish, the pari-mutuels and the barrier. There is no objection to the photo finish and the pari-mutuels, but the hard-shelled old harness men, steeped in tradition and considering what was good enough 50 years ago as good enough today, bitterly assail the barrier.

They claim that the device will eliminate any chance of a record, as the 70 feet between the barrier and starting line is not enough to permit the trotters to get in proper stride.

They have reluctantly bowed to the modern touch, but their sentiment toward tradition remains unchanged, even as the drowsing hamlet of Goshen remains unchanged through the years.

Detroit Takes It On Chin 9-7 from Macks' Jinx Team

Freddie Hutchinson Goes Sour and Benton Is No Sugar

DETROIT, July 29 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers took it on the chin again today, dropping a 9 to 7 decision to their jinx, the Philadelphia Athletics, to cut their American league lead to one game.

Freddie Hutchinson, the $70,000 investment who was recalled recently from the minors, started on the mound for the Tigers and for four innings had the A's eating out of his hand.

Then he lost his cunning and the Athletics jumped on him for four runs in the fifth. They shelled him from the hill in the seventh, in which they tallied five more runs, and even fireman Al Benton couldn't do anything about it.

Hutchinson's teammates gave him a three-run lead in the first when Rudy York slammed his sixteenth homer of the season with two aboard and regained it in the fifth when Hank Greenberg belted a round-tripper into the uppper deck of the left field stands with one on base.

Ten A's went to bat in the seventh but Hutchison was relieved after filling the bases with none out on Al Brancato's single, Nelson Potter's double, and a walk to Al Rubeling.

Benton, usually effective in relief roles, was sour this time, and, when the inning was over, the Athletics had scored five runs and won the ball game.

Bob Feller Is "News" As Vitt Sings Blues

The tooth was cracked last week when a sandlot rookie accidentally hit the young moundsman with a thrown ball during pre-game practice. The ball struck Feller on the cheek.

Burley Beats Abrams

PITTSBURGH, July 29 (AP) — Charley Burley, 156, Pittsburgh negro, and Georgie Abrams, 161, Washington, fought to a draw in ten rounds tonight, the negro's heavier and cleaner punching being offset in part by his loss of the first two rounds because of low hitting.

Mike Raffa, 128, of Newell, W. Va., a promising young featherweight, won his 19th straight victory by knocking out Sammy Crocetti, 129, of New York, with a left hook in the second of their scheduled eight round fight.

Tommy Yarosz, 148, of Monaca, Pa., young brother of the former middleweight champion, Teddy Yarosz, easily outpointed Joe Pohaskey, 150, of McKees Rocks, Pa., in a six-round preliminary.

The Pitchers Decide

No matter how you figure it, in the final analysis the pitchers decide the pennant races. That is so obvious that no one ever should be confused about it. But it happens that once in a while—generally in the spring—there is some confusion on that point. It seems at that time that all that counts in baseball is power and that if a team can send a string of sluggers up to the plate its pitching doesn't matter.

It only seems that way, however. The real answers begin to come in along about this time of the season. In the American League the Tigers are up there because they have the best balance of punch and pitching in the league, and the Indians are close behind them mainly because of their pitching. The Red Sox and the Yankees can hit but their pitching has foundered.

In the National League the Dodgers and the Reds were head and head for a long while. Now the Reds are far out in front and the Dodgers are screaming for help. The gap between them was fashioned by the Reds' pitchers—and the Dodgers are pulling hurlers up from the minor leagues in an effort to hold themselves together.

Meanwhile, the Cardinals are in fifth place—and remember that in the spring they were rated as the chief menace of the Reds—and were picked by many to win the pennant? There was no disillusionment then about the quality of the Cardinal pitching. But the dope was that even if it just picked up a little bit, Medwick—then in a Cardinal uniform—and Mize and Slaughter and Padgett and Martin and the rest of that mauling crew would batter down the enemy. Well, they're all there still, except Medwick and Joe's passing to the Dodgers didn't weaken the Cards. But they're in fifth place because they can't get the pitching.

Case of the Yankees

Lots of things have happened to the Yankees since they opened the season heavily backed to win a fifth pennant in a row. Joe DiMaggio was hurt and out of the line-up for a while. Bill Dickey and Joe Gordan faltered. Until recently the famed attack couldn't function with consistency.

But the main fault was the pitching. Charlie Ruffing and Vernon Gomez waned and the youngsters, Bruer and Russo, didn't move up to take their places. In a spot like that, Pearson and Hadley and Hildebrand weren't strong enough to carry the burden and even Johnny Murphy, most reliable of relief pitchers these last two or three years, went into a tailspin.

It was that which knocked the Yankees down. No matter how well they might hit, they couldn't have carried pitching like that. And if they are to rouse themselves and come on through August and September to win again, the pitchers will have to lead the way. On the basis of the kind of pitching they have had so far, the Yankees are exactly where they belong.

The Tigers' Outlook

Man for man—outside the box—the Tigers do not appear to be a good match for the Yankees, the Red Sox or even the Indians. York is clumsy at first base, Gehringer has slowed down at second, Bartell, spark plug of the infield, is out with injuries, Higgins at third base is shopworn—and so on. The Tigers can hit, of course. They have plenty of power.

But the main answer lies with Bobo Newsom, Tommy Bridges and Hal Newhauser. Newsom was having his best year until he suffered a broken thumb. Bridges has moved along smoothly. Newhouser has been a tremendous help. If Newsom shouldn't pick up where he left off when he was hurt—if Bridgse, no longer a youngster, should tire through the last two months of the campaign—if Newhouser, who now has a sore arm, continues to have trouble with it—the Tigers will not stay up there.

The Red Riflemen

The Reds are hot right now—hotter than they have been at any time—hotter than they were when they won the pennant last year. They are so hot that the pennant not only has been virtually conceded to them but they will be favored to win the world series, no matter which club wins in the American League.

The reason? Chiefly the pitching. In Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters they have the best pair of pitchers in either league. Swinging along with them are Gene Thompson, Lloyd Moore and the veteran Jim Turner. With that bunch to do their pitching, the Reds are slump-proof.

The Dodgers can hit, have one of the best infields in either league and plenty of hustle and fight. But their pitching has been spotty all year and their pitching has pulled them down.

The Indians have been in and out of first place most of the way. They have a pretty good punch, a fine second-base combination in Boudreau and Mack—and, above all, the pitching of Feller and Milnar and Smith.

The Red Sox have Jimmy Foxx, Doc Cramer, Dom DiMaggio, Lou Finney, Joe Cronin, Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr—and no pitching. Nobody has moved up to take the place of Old Mose Grove, who kept them from skidding last year.

Jeffra Wins over Spider Armstrong

BALTIMORE, July 29 (AP)—Harry Jeffra of Baltimore successfully defended his newly-won featheweight boxing crown tonight by punching out a decision over Spider Armstrong of Toronto in a fast and furious 15-round bout.

It was an uphill battle all the way for the Pimlico lad, but once he had slowed up the wiry challenger with a vicious overhead right that sent Armstrong sprawling to the floor in the eleventh, he had things well in hand.

Results of Other Bouts

Paul Chinn, 124, Baltimore, defeated Pee Wee Lewis, 122, Baltimore, technical knockout, third round.

Robert Bane Beats Loraine Eisenberg

Account of rain yesterday afternoon the Dingle courts were the only city courts available for the Allegany County tennis tournament players.

The most interesting match of the day was between Robert Bane and Lotaine Eisenberg, which Bane won after a hotly contested second set going to Eisenberg. The final scores were 6-2, 8-10, 6-2.

Charles Jones disposed of James Reinhart, 6-1, 6-0. David Weiss downed Peyton Brown, 6-2, 6-2.

Robert King and J. W. McClure in doubles eliminated the team of J. W. Holmes and Jack Evans, 6-4, 8-10, 6-3.

Matches will be continued today on all city courts weather permitting.

Boston, July 29, (AP)—Ray Berres, Boston Bees catcher, and his childhood sweetheart, Miss Irma Ludwig, of Kenosha, Wis., were married yesterday at the Sacred Heart Church, Newton.

After the ceremony the bridegroom hurried to National League field to catch the second game of the doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates. Berres came to Boston from Pittsburgh earlier this year in the deal which sent Al Lopez to the Pirates.

Gephart Claims Jupers Forfeited Loop Clash

Yanks Are Better Bargain Now than In Walk-away Race

Hot Contest Packs in Fans Negotiator of Deal Declares

CLEVELAND, July 29 (AP)—The fourth-place New York Yankees are a better bargain to their prospective purchasers than a walk-away championship team would be.

Take the word of Smith Davis, Cleveland broker who has been negotiating purchase of the Yankees and affiliated clubs, for a reported $4,000,000, in behalf of a group including James A. Farley.

Davis explained:

"There's a hot contest for the American League pennant. The baseball public likes a contest and will pay for it."

Davis, dynamic, 39-year-old former halfback, warmed to his subject today as he sped to Cleveland airport to catch an east-bound plane:

"The attendance figures tell the story. The Yankee stadium bulged with 82,437 fans Memorial Day when New York and Boston met in a doubleheader. That's the third largest crowd in all baseball history.

"And only a week ago a crowd of 68,590 saw a twin bill there between the Yanks and Detroit.

Davis maintained silence concerning the identity of the prospective Yankee purchasers, but Farley has been linked reliably with the project. Counsel for the estate of Col. Jacob Ruppert, Yankee owner, recently said a deal virtually was closed.

Davis, a native Ohioan and former member of the New York Stock Exchange, was a stellar football halfback at Western Reserve University, where he studied law. He has closed many millions of dollars' worth of newspaper purchases.

City Softball Loop Meeting Tonight

The City Softball League will hold a meeting at the Central Y. M. C. A. this evening at 8 o'clock if a playoff is necessary to determin the championship, President Clif Fearer announced yesterday when the Keegan Gassers, who won the first half race, North End Merchants and Police Boys' Club are still in the running for the second half flag with closing games carded this evening.

If the Gassers finish on top again there will be no playoff, and Skipper Bill Keegan can take the rest of the week to prepare his team for the start of state title play in Baltimore this Sunday. The playoff series, if necessary, must be completed by Saturday as the state eliminations start Sunday.

President Fearer has been advised by Fred Crosby, Maryland State Softball Association commissioner that the City League runnerup team as well as the champions will be eligible to compete in state play. Participation, however, will cost the runnerup team a special entry of $2. Each team will also be permitted to sign and use one player in addition to the tossers already under contract.

Battle to Deadlock

Ellerslie and Stringtown battled to a 7-7 nine inning deadlock in their county league game at Stringtown yesterday. Doc Emerick was nicked for 14 hits while Ellerslie collected 14 off Holler's handiwork.

Manley Has Fairgo Set 'To Make Mare Go'

51 Horses on Hand With Many 'Fans' Visiting Grounds

One Look and One Learns Why Manley Gave Up Other Posts

Harry Is Harried by Boys Seeking "Annie Oakleys"

Four or five "no admittance placards and as many "kep out" signs bar the way to the "sanctum sanctorum" (or private office to us of the U. S.) where Harry Manley holds forth within the grandstand of the Cumberland Fair Association at Fairgo.

All one has to do is fail to see the signs and sally straight through a couple of officers and a corridor and there, inside the door of the room where the most noise comes from, is the president and general-manager of the Fair association, Harry Manley himself, flanked usually by Cliff White in person, and the pair generally grouped by a gang of horsemen, would-be-horsemen or would-be free patrons at the Fair Association's ten day race meet which opens today a week—next Tuesday to be exact.

Fifty-One Horses and?? Fans

In fact Manley's job is most exacting. One visit there and one doesn't wonder why he forewent the frolic of running for election as city commissioner of Cumberland to succeed himself as head of the police and fire departments. His job as president and general-manager of the fair gives him plenty of riffles and he must of necessity "paddle his own canoe," which is why Jimmy Orr is paddling in the police department in Manley's place.

There were fifty-one horses on the Fairgo premises yesterday afternoon just before the rain came up, and came down. There had been several times fifty-one frenzied friends, foes and Fairgo ticket-seekers in and out of Manley's office before the rain halted the procession and permitted Manley to get away from there to Bel Air where he will witness the races today.

Most recent arrival was the stable of J. O. Hay who has the oat-burners, Black Brigade, Lady Peg, Frances Cooper and Miss Macy in his stable. Hay, who claims his name is a family one and not an adopted horseman's nom de plume, also has in tow a pony named "Mike," and stable boy, Edward Greathouse, claims "Mike" can run as fast as some horses. None of the gambling gentry present disputed Edward's word, and for the time a pony named "Mike" is the fastest thing on four legs at the Fair Grounds. Probably a lot more people will agree with Edward after the horses start running next week.

Hay's horses ran with "some success" at Hambleton, Ohio, after having a good meet at Wheeling, W. Va.

N. S. Scava, the West Virginia horseman, has had his stable here since the close of the Hagerstown meet. He has Democracy, Star Mixer and Star Prove in his string and hopes to have better luck this year than last.

Scava lost My Dominator here last year after scoring a long price win with him, and his Star Mixer lost the winning end of the purse in each of four photo-finishes. Scava will give Sam Infantino the mount on his horses here this year and it will be the first time the personable little Italian lad will wear colors.

"Must" for Movie Fans

Movie fans will be interested in the lone entry of Floyd Butler who has Buck Benny, four-year-old gelding by Upset out of Helen T., stabled with the Scava string. Buck Benny was bought as a yearling by Mary Livingston, radio star, and named after the movie "Buck Benny Rides Again" in which her equally famous husband, Jack Benny, was starred. It was not until yesterday that Scava learned that his Star Prove was a half-brother to Buck Benny, both claiming Upset as their sire.

Hay's stable was the first of several which are shipping here from the Ohio courses to join the stables that raced at Charles Town and Hagerstown and are skipping the Bel Air meet.

The fair grounds, actually and honestly, presented a spic and span appearance yesterday, even before the much needed rain added another touch of sprightliness to the grass and grounds which were in need of sprinkling after the recent long dry spell.

Manley has reason to be encouraged over prospects for the 'best yet" in the run of banner seasons the local meet has enjoyed. This year he's not just "whistling through a graveyard" when he voices his high hopes for a well attended and worth-while race meet.

All other tracks have had bigger and better seasons and, with conditions what they are in this section this year, Cumberland should also see banner turnouts and a record turnover in the mutuels, which is what makes the mare go at Fairgo as elsewhere at any fair.

Root Needs Seven

Passeau Pitches Cubs to 7 to 3 Win Over Philadelphia

Settles Down after Poor Start To Score 12th Victory

PHILADELPHIA, July 29. (AP)—Claude Passeau settled down after the first inning today and pitched the Chicago Cubs to a 7 to 3 victory over the Phillies for his 12th triumph of the year.

The first four men to face Passeau got on base on three singles and a walk, but Art Mahan was caught at third to prevent any scoring until Joe Marty singled with the bases full. In the last eight innings Passeau gave up only three hits, ont Marty's ninth homer of the season.

Ike Pearson held the Cubs in check until the sixth when singles by Hank Leiber and Al Todd put Passeau ahead, 3-2. Four runs in the seventh, featured by Todd's double with the bases full, sewed up the game. Billy Herman homered for the Cubs in the first.

Five games—including the first half championship playoff battle Friday between the Junior Association of Commerce and B. P. O. Elks outfits—will be played this week by Rocking Chair Softball League teams.

Knights of Pythias tossers, defeated in their first two starts, will oppose the Junior A. C. outfit at Fort Hill High and the Knights of Columbus and City Police crews will clash on the Ridgeley High field in games today at 5:30.

City Police, on the bottom at the end of the first half race, downed the Elks and K. of P. outfits last week, Junior A. of C. scored over the Elks, and K. of C defeated K. of P.

The Elks, who loaf today, will meet K. of P. at Ridgeley and the K. of C. will oppose J. A. C. at Fort Hill in Thursday battles.

Elks tossers have dropped their last three league starts, losing twice to City Police and once to J. A. C. The Coppers have won their last three engagements and the fast J. A. C. outfit has a record of six straight victories.

Friday's playoff between the Elks and J. A. C. will be staged on the Fort Hill diamond at 5:30. Records show the J. A. C. has taken three of five games from the Elks in meetings so far this season.

BEL AIR, Md., July 29. (AP)—Buddy Al, owned by A. L. Leith, raced to a half-length victory in the Kingsville purse, fifth race here today, to pay his backers $108.70 for $2.

Buddy Al led for three furlongs of the five furlong sprint, chased in by R. C. Waple's Hiblaze, and Ewart Johnston's Cats Cradle.

Stewards dismissed a complaint by M. Beltzacker, Highblaze's rider, against E. Churchill, jockey of the long-shot winner.

Buddy Al paid $51.80 to place and $14.20 to show in a day marked by triumphs for the long-shots. The daily double paid $55.40 for $2 with Mayfern and Gennaro.

Mayfern took the opener by three lengths over Buckle Up, the favorite. Third choice, Mayfern paid $9.30 for $2. The track drew 5,000 spectators today.

Cards Paced by Mize in Beating Boston Bees 8 to 3

Knocks in Half Runs as St. Louis Makes Hits Count

BOSTON, July 29 (AP)—Paced by Johnny Mize, who knocked in half the runs, the St. Louis Cardinals made their hits count today to beat the Boston Bees 8 to 3 in the first of a four-game series.

The Cards picked up four runs on four hits in the first inning, then got three for three in the seventh, while Terry Moore chalked up seven put-outs in center field.

The Cardinal's attack in the first began with a single by Brown, Then Moore doubled and Slaughter walked, filling the bases. Mize's single scored Brown and Moore. Slaughter came in and Mize took second on a balk. Mize then scored on Stu Martin's single.

A fumble by Powell as the seventh opened but Stu Martin on first and started a three-run splurge.

Saratoga Society Snubs Mutuels

SARATOGA SPRINGS, July 29. (AP)—Tradition and the iron-men tangled for the first time today and tradition won in a common gallop. Saratoga's society crowd just didn't go for pari-mutuel betting.

A crowd of 7,701 came to the Beautiful race course in the foothills of the Adirondacks and gaped. They watched George D. Widener's speedy two-year-old Overdrawn tumble Anthony Pelleteri's High Breeze from the ranks of the unbeaten two-year-olds in winning the day's featured Flash Stakes.

Some had fun on that one, those who bet on the winner at $34.20 for $2. They had a lot more fun in the day's secondary feature, the American Legion Handicap, when Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Nedays won at $19.60 to $2.

But they didn't bet. The New York crowd—society excepted—isn't in town and the residents of this horsey area, also opposed the advent of the mutuels in the first place, refused to take the rubber bands off their bankrolls. The Flash caught only $42,818, the 'Cap but $35,311.

Confidence Man

New York, July 29—Billy Southworth says his job with the Cardinals was to restore the confidence of the pitchers. It is plain he has made progress in that direction.

IT'S ALL BOBBY'S NOW

Bobby Riggs (right) of Chicago, retired the Seabright Bowl, symbol of victory in the men's singles of the annual Seabright, N. J., tennis tournament, when he scored his third successive win of the title by beating Frank Kovacs (left). The unseeded and unranked Kovacs carried Riggs to five sets before Bobby downed him 2-6; 0-6; 6-3; 11-9; 10-8.

Mountain Lake Tennis Tourney Champs of 1939 Return This Year

OAKLAND, Md., July 29—Last year's winners in the annual tennis tournament for Western Maryland Championship will return to Mountain Lake Park this year for the twenty-first annual event, to be held August 12 to 17 on the tournament courts adjacent to the bowling alleys, it was announced by Mrs. W. N. Skyles, one of the officers of the local organization.

In addition to Price Colvin, Baltimore, men's singles winner, and Joy Hartman, Pittsburgh, women's singles winner, a number of other entries have already been received with indications that the tournament will equal if not surpass those of other years.

Hon. Jennings Randolph, West Virginia Congressman, who participated in the first tournament and who has attended most of the events since that time, has again entered his name as a competitor. Frank Roberts, secretary of the Middle Atlantic Lawn Tennis association, Baltimore, will again bring a group of young hopefuls here to compete. He has been bringing an outstanding group of young players to the Park for the past three or four years.

Men's singles play begins August 12 at 10 a. m., with women's singles beginning Wednesday, August 14. Men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles will be played throughout the remainder of the week and the finals in the singles events will be played Saturday, August 17.

Two cups will be in competition. The present Western Maryland challenge cup in men's singles was first won by B. F. Arkle, Wheeling, W. Va., in 1929, and since then only one person, Frank Broida, Pittsburgh, has been able to win more than once. It must be won three times for permanent possession.

The trophy for women was won in 1938 and 1939 by Joy Hartman, of Pittsburgh, who will attempt to win it permanently this year.

Suitable prizes will be awarded winners and runners-up in all events.

Committees

In charge of playing details of the tournament are: Ralph E. Weber, chairman, Oakland; G. A. Sawin, East Pittsburgh, Pa.; W. J. Clardy, Clarence A. Hartman, John R. Brown, Miss Dolly Harris, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Evelyn Claybrook Bowie, Cumberland; Will Weber and Haymond Rapp, Clarksburg, W. Va., Wright Hugus, Wheeling; Elmer Rudy, Denwood Kelly, Frank G. Roberts, Baltimore; Miss Frances Grimes, Miss Katherine McLain, Mountain Lake Park; Mrs. Naomi Thompson, Washington, Pa.

Mrs. W. N. Skyles is chairman of the committee on finance; Mrs. Haymond Rapp, Clarksburg, is chairman of the social committee and will be assisted by Mrs. Bushrod Grimes, Mrs. Charles Bolgiano, Mrs. W. D. Manley Has Fairgo Set 'To Make Mare Go'

51 Horses on Hand With Many 'Fans' Visiting Grounds

One Look and One Learns Why Manley Gave Up Other Posts

Harry Is Harried by Boys Seeking "Annie Oakleys"

Four or five "no admittance placards and as many "kep out" signs bar the way to the "sanctum sanctorum" (or private office to us of the U. S.) where Harry Manley holds forth within the grandstand of the Cumberland Fair Association at Fairgo.

All one has to do is fail to see the signs and sally straight through a couple of officers and a corridor and there, inside the door of the room where the most noise comes from, is the president and general-manager of the Fair association, Harry Manley himself, flanked usually by Cliff White in person, and the pair generally grouped by a gang of horsemen, would-be-horsemen or would-be free patrons at the Fair Association's ten day race meet which opens today a week—next Tuesday to be exact.

Fifty-One Horses and?? Fans

In fact Manley's job is most exacting. One visit there and one doesn't wonder why he forewent the frolic of running for election as city commissioner of Cumberland to succeed himself as head of the police and fire departments. His job as president and general-manager of the fair gives him plenty of riffles and he must of necessity "paddle his own canoe," which is why Jimmy Orr is paddling in the police department in Manley's place.

There were fifty-one horses on the Fairgo premises yesterday afternoon just before the rain came up, and came down. There had been several times fifty-one frenzied friends, foes and Fairgo ticket-seekers in and out of Manley's office before the rain halted the procession and permitted Manley to get away from there to Bel Air where he will witness the races today.

Most recent arrival was the stable of J. O. Hay who has the oat-burners, Black Brigade, Lady Peg, Frances Cooper and Miss Macy in his stable. Hay, who claims his name is a family one and not an adopted horseman's nom de plume, also has in tow a pony named "Mike," and stable boy, Edward Greathouse, claims "Mike" can run as fast as some horses. None of the gambling gentry present disputed Edward's word, and for the time a pony named "Mike" is the fastest thing on four legs at the Fair Grounds. Probably a lot more people will agree with Edward after the horses start running next week.

N. S. Scava, the West Virginia horseman, has had his stable here since the close of the Hagerstown meet. He has Democracy, Star Mixer and Star Prove in his string and hopes to have better luck this year than last.

Scava lost My Dominator here last year after scoring a long price win with him, and his Star Mixer lost the winning end of the purse in each of four photo-finishes. Scava will give Sam Infantino the mount on his horses here this year and it will be the first time the personable little Italian lad will wear colors.

"Must" for Movie Fans

Movie fans will be interested in the lone entry of Floyd Butler who has Buck Benny, four-year-old gelding by Upset out of Helen T., stabled with the Scava string. Buck Benny was bought as a yearling by Mary Livingston, radio star, and named after the movie "Buck Benny Rides Again" in which her equally famous husband, Jack Benny, was starred. It was not until yesterday that Scava learned that his Star Prove was a half-brother to Buck Benny, both claiming Upset as their sire.

Hay's stable was the first of several which are shipping here from the Ohio courses to join the stables that raced at Charles Town and Hagerstown and are skipping the Bel Air meet.

The fair grounds, actually and honestly, presented a spic and span appearance yesterday, even before the much needed rain added another touch of sprightliness to the grass and grounds which were in need of sprinkling after the recent long dry spell.

Manley has reason to be encouraged over prospects for the 'best yet" in the run of banner seasons the local meet has enjoyed. This year he's not just "whistling through a graveyard" when he voices his high hopes for a well attended and worth-while race meet.

All other tracks have had bigger and better seasons and, with conditions what they are in this section this year, Cumberland should also see banner turnouts and a record turnover in the mutuels, which is what makes the mare go at Fairgo as elsewhere at any fair.

Root Needs Seven

Passeau Pitches Cubs to 7 to 3 Win Over Philadelphia

Settles Down after Poor Start To Score 12th Victory

PHILADELPHIA, July 29. (AP)—Claude Passeau settled down after the first inning today and pitched the Chicago Cubs to a 7 to 3 victory over the Phillies for his 12th triumph of the year.

The first four men to face Passeau got on base on three singles and a walk, but Art Mahan was caught at third to prevent any scoring until Joe Marty singled with the bases full. In the last eight innings Passeau gave up only three hits, ont Marty's ninth homer of the season.

Ike Pearson held the Cubs in check until the sixth when singles by Hank Leiber and Al Todd put Passeau ahead, 3-2. Four runs in the seventh, featured by Todd's double with the bases full, sewed up the game. Billy Herman homered for the Cubs in the first.

Cards Paced by Mize in Beating Boston Bees 8 to 3

Knocks in Half Runs as St. Louis Makes Hits Count

BOSTON, July 29 (AP)—Paced by Johnny Mize, who knocked in half the runs, the St. Louis Cardinals made their hits count today to beat the Boston Bees 8 to 3 in the first of a four-game series.

The Cards picked up four runs on four hits in the first inning, then got three for three in the seventh, while Terry Moore chalked up seven put-outs in center field.

It was the sixth straight defeat for the Bees.

The Cardinal's attack in the first began with a single by Brown, Then Moore doubled and Slaughter walked, filling the bases. Mize's single scored Brown and Moore. Slaughter came in and Mize took second on a balk. Mize then scored on Stu Martin's single.

A fumble by Powell as the seventh opened but Stu Martin on first and started a three-run splurge.

Saratoga Society Snubs Mutuels

SARATOGA SPRINGS, July 29. (AP)—Tradition and the iron-men tangled for the first time today and tradition won in a common gallop. Saratoga's society crowd just didn't go for pari-mutuel betting.

A crowd of 7,701 came to the Beautiful race course in the foothills of the Adirondacks and gaped. They watched George D. Widener's speedy two-year-old Overdrawn tumble Anthony Pelleteri's High Breeze from the ranks of the unbeaten two-year-olds in winning the day's featured Flash Stakes.

Some had fun on that one, those who bet on the winner at $34.20 for $2. They had a lot more fun in the day's secondary feature, the American Legion Handicap, when Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Nedays won at $19.60 to $2.

But they didn't bet. The New York crowd—society excepted—isn't in town and the residents of this horsey area, also opposed the advent of the mutuels in the first place, refused to take the rubber bands off their bankrolls. The Flash caught only $42,818, the 'Cap but $35,311.

Maryland Guide Is Compiled as W.P.A. Project

Celanese Plant and Constitution Park Practically Ignored in Book

Former Marylanders who dip into the newly published Maryland Guide will possibly feel a touch of homesickness coming on and promptly start planning visits to their former hometowns in the Great Free State.

For the massive 523-page volume compiled by the Writers Project of the WPA is jampacked with all sort of interesting stuff including history, folklore, chief industries, cookery, chapters on the state's cities and towns, tours and even descriptions of the more popular ghosts.

Two Serious Omissions

While the attractively bound book is very readable and embelished with interesting illustrations and charts, it is probable that Cumberlanders will grumble over what will be regarded as two serious omissions in the chapter dealing with the Queen City. For two of the most talked about points of interest here, the Celanese plant and Constitution park are barely mentioned.

A perusal of the chapter on Cumberland reveals that while the B. & O. shops, Kelly-Springfield Tire Company etc, are alloted due space, the Celanese plant is reduced to a footnote in 6-point. Flipping the pages to the chapter on "Industries," the reader once again finds the Celanese plant practically ignored although the writer does comment that "the Celanese plant is the largest artificial silk plant of its type in the country."

Constitution Park, regarded with pride hereabouts, also seems to have been overlooked by the project writers when they dug up their Cumberland data. The big park is ignored in a resume of "Points of Interest" in the Cumberland chapter although the park is mentioned in small type as the site of annual summer outdoor concerts.

Contains Local History

However, the corps of writers did manage to pack in considerable local history in their ten-page account on Cumberland, mentioning among other things that "through the years Cumberland has served as a barometer of the national economic situation; as production and carloadings go down nationally this city is one of the first to tighten its belt. Long before other parts of the country have evidence of returning good times, Cumberland has heard the increasing volume of clicking wheels and tooting whistles and is again hard at work."

The writers sensibly do not try to summon a number of adjectives supposed to define the intrinsic qualities that make Maryland, Maryland.

"Natives rarely try to define the state's individuality," the book states, "outsiders try too hard, and, to existing knowledge have not yet succeeded. English? Yes; for its conservatism, stolidity. Southern? Yes; in its frequent lassitude, its willingness to sacrifice prospects of progress to known, safe comforts. Northern? Yes; in its occasional outbursts of efficiency and industry. Maryland is all these and more."

"Albert Cabell Ritchie, four times governor of Maryland, was born in Virginia," the author writes. "But one of the reasons he was governor four times in succession was because he represented—to most Marylanders—all the things they knew and couldn't explain about their state. He defined and expressed, by an inflection of his voice, the essence of the place he had made his home, when he ended many of his public addresses with the words, 'Maryland, My Maryland.'"

While Cumberlanders may feel the local situation might have been covered a bit more fully in the book, most of them will probably agree that the corps of writers has packed much valuable information into the work.

The volume has been published by the Oxford University Press.

Action Delayed on "Four Year Plan" By Civic Group

Matter Will Be Held Open until Board of Directors Meet

Members of the Junior Association of Commerce met last night in the club rooms of Central Y. M. C. A. for an open discussion of the "Four Year Plan" as a civic project.

There were twenty-two members present and in the absence of a quorum, no formal action was taken upon the adoption of the plan as a project of the association.

During the discussion which lasted over two hours, Fred Z. Hetzel, president explained that the Board of Directors, is empowered to adopt the "Four Year Plan" as a project, but mutually agreed to present it to the membership before formal action. The board desires an expression of opinion by the membership, the president said. He asked for individual ideas regarding the proposal, and whether the association should endeavor to obtain its adoption.

Proposal Explained

The "Four Year Plan", it was outlined, is a proposal to petition for an act of legislature to amend the city code of Cumberland, so the term of office served by city officials shall be four years instead of two. This would eliminate an election each second year and the money saved would be used to increase salaries of the mayor and councilmen.

Members of the association discussed various phases of the question and all but three of those present voted to favor the plan as an improvement over the present system and as a favorable project for the Association.

Nine of those present expressed the opinion they would favor a project for city management in Cumberland and five of these nine favored the plan in preference to the proposed "Four Year Plan" if the association should adopt it as project.

All of those present agreed that the proposed "Four Year Plan" is a step in the right direction, and believe it would help improve city government.

Various Plans Favored

There were many things discussed at the meeting besides the question of the "Four Year Plan." There were those who talked about "Home Rule," others who favored city management, and others who advocated only one term of office for city officials.

But after all the discussion, which was informal, due to the absence of a quorum, it was evident the majority would support the plan as a project, if it is adopted by the board of directors, but many reserve the right to offer some other plan or some other idea, in many cases admitting the likelihood of adoption remote, if not almost impossible for a long time to come.

The George F. Hazelwood company has the building contract and S. Russ Minter, architect, furnished the plans.

The building will have a concrete foundation, brick walls and the roof will be covered with gypsum. The new structure will front thirty-two feet on Mechanic street, and will be 120 feet long and will be thirty-seven feet wide in the rear.

Lewis M. Wilson Is Elected Chairman Of G.O.P. State Central Committee

NEW GOP CHAIRMAN—Lewis M. Wilson, prominent Cumberland lawyer and former city attorney, last night was elected chairman of the Republican State Central committee of Allegany county to succeed Col. George Henderson. "I will accept," Wilson said immediately when informed of his election, added "I'm looking forward to a big Willkie victory in Allegany county and the nation this fall."

Local Attorney Unanimously Chosen To Succeed Col. Henderson

Lewis M. Wilson, of 819 Mount Royal avenue, former city attorney, last night was elected chairman of the Republican State Central committee of Allegany county by unanimous vote at a meeting of the seven-member group in the Gunter hotel, in Frostburg.

Mr. Wilson, a native of Eckhart, this county, was named to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Col. George Henderson, who deemed it best to step down at this time because he shortly will be called into active service at the National Guard training camp at Renssalaer Falls, New York, and found it impossible to devote his attention to the committee work. Col. Henderson had been chairman of the committee since September, 1938.

Predicts Willkie Victory

The new chairman was elated when informed of his appointment and declared that he will accept the honor. He added that he "was looking forward to a big Willkie victory in Allegany county and the nation this fall."

A member of the Allegany county bar since 1922, Wilson received his education at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., and his law degree at the University of Maryland, College Park. He filled the unexpired term of John G. Shearer as commissioner of finance and revenue for the City of Cumberland when the latter was appointed to the board of Allegany county commissioners during George Henderson's term as mayor and was city attorney in 1934 and 1935 under the administration of Mayor George W. Legge.

Mr. Wilson was exalted ruler of Cumberland Lodge No. 63 when the B. P. O. Elks home was built on South Centre street. He is a member of the reception committee for the Maryland Department American Legion convention which will be held here August 21 to 24.

All Members Attend

A committee from the Frostburg Young Men's Republican club consisting of Robert Geary, Donald Jeffries, Harry Eisel and John Grim, told the county Republican group that it plans a house-to-house canvass in the Frostburg area in an effort to have all Republicans registered on the county books for the fall election. The young organization was assured the full support of the G. O. P. committee.

Gateway Chatter

by News Staff Members

There seems to be something fascinating about watching men work, particularly construction crews and street workers.

This was attested yesterday when dozens of persons gathered along the sidewalks to watch Cumberland Contracting Company workmen resurface Baltimore street.

The workmen did a good job and in fast time, completing the entire project, from the B. & O. crossing to the Western Maryland crossing in 16 hours and the street was thrown open to traffic at 7 p. m.

Spectators also can be seen each day seeking vantage points to watch progress on the Montgomery Ward building at the corner of Baltimore and George streets. Many cannot let a day pass without stopping by to see how the job is getting along.

In large cities when a new building is under construction crowds of several hundred persons constantly watch the workmen. In Charleston, W. Va., several years ago one fellow passed out printed cards to the watchers certifying them as "sidewalk foremen" and has this act was given wide publicity in Charleston papers.

Gateway Chatter hasn't heard of any Cumberland barbers who attended, but the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing, in America (what won't they think of next?) held a contest at the World's fair in New York last week with $4,000 prizes going to successful quartets.

The July issue of the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine, which has just reached the editorial desk, carries two articles in which Cumberland folks will be interested. The first is entitled "B. & O. Water Supply at Cumberland."

The article says in part "One of the sources from which our trains are watered is located in the Allegany mountains nine miles from Cumberland and the two large dams constructed in recent years serve the City of Cumberland, as well as its many industries."

Conway stated that the city will insist on the payment of all back water bills amounting to $73,651.52 for the years of 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1940. The last batch of bills were sent out in April and bills for the new period will be ready about September 20.

Religious Leaders Study Problems Of Old World

Believe Two Factors May Intervene To Save European Civilization

Two factors may intervene and save British and European civilization according to religious leaders who attended the Harvard Summer School conference on Religious Principles and Contemporary National and International Issues, Rabbi Aaron H. Lefkowitz reported yesterday.

Two Points Stressed

1—Stalin distract Hitler's attention by creating a disturbance in the Balkans.

The conference, called to find a way to mobilize the basic principles of all religious beliefs to preserve the sacredness of human personality, agreed that the United States should lend England every form of material aid with the exception of manpower.

Rabbi Lefkowitz said the conference foresaw that although Hitler may conquer all Europe, it would not necessarily be a lasting subjugation.

Prominent Men Participate

Leaders of the afternoon forum sessions were Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing Protestant religions; Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, rabbi of The Temple, Cleveland, Ohio, representing the Jewish faith; and Dr. Gerald B. Phelan, president of the Institute of Mediaeval Studies, Toronto, Canada, representing the Catholic belief.

Among the evening speakers were Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University; Norman Thomas, Socialist leader; S. K. Ratcliffe, English lecturer and former writer for the Manchester Guardian; Dr. Hjalmar J. Procope, minister of Finland; Harper Sibley, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and Miss Sarah Wambaugh, member of the League of Nation's Saar Plebiscite Commission.

The discussions of the conference were summed up at the final evening session by Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, director of the Harvard University Summer School, who spoke at a Cumberland Community Forum three years ago. Rabbi Lefkowitz will make his notes on the conference the basis of a series of talks later.

Rain Interrupts Resurfacing of Park Street

Work of resurfacing Park street was two-thirds completed yesterday when a heavy downpour of rain shortly after the noon hour caused employees of the Cumberland Contracting company to call a halt until early today when the job will be finished. Starting at Williams street, the workers had advanced past Central avenue when rain put in its appearance. The contract calls for resurfacing Park street from Williams to Union street.

Earl C. Robertson, vice-president of the Cumberland Contracting company, said that the two-day job of resurfacing North Centre street from Baltimore to Smith street will get under way tomorrow. North Mechanic street from Baltimore to Valley street will be improved Friday and Saturday.

Maryland Guide Is Compiled as W.P.A. Project

Celanese Plant and Constitution Park Practically Ignored in Book

Former Marylanders who dip into the newly published Maryland Guide will possibly feel a touch of homesickness coming on and promptly start planning visits to their former hometowns in the Great Free State.

For the massive 523-page volume compiled by the Writers Project of the WPA is jampacked with all sort of interesting stuff including history, folklore, chief industries, cookery, chapters on the state's cities and towns, tours and even descriptions of the more popular ghosts.

Two Serious Omissions

While the attractively bound book is very readable and embellished with interesting illustrations and charts, it is probable that Cumberlanders will grumble over what will be regarded as two serious omissions in the chapter dealing with the Queen City. For two of the most talked about points of interest here, the Calanese plant and Constitution park are barely mentioned.

A perusal of the chapter on Cumberland reveals that while the B. & O. shops, Kelly-Springfield Tire Company etc. are alloted due space, the Celanese plant is reduced to a footnote in 6-point. Flipping the pages to the chapter on "Industries," the reader once again finds the Celanese plant practically ignored although the writer does comment that "the Celanese plant is the largest artificial silk plant of its type in the country."

Constitution Park, regarded with pride hereabouts, also seems to have been overlooked by the project writers when they dug up their Cumberland data. The big park is ignored in a resume of "Points of Interest" in the Cumberland chapter although the park is mentioned in small type as the site of annual summer outdoor concerts.

Contains Local History

However, the corps of writers did manage to pack in considerable local history in their ten-page account on Cumberland, mentioning among other things that "through the years Cumberland has served as a barometer of the national economic situation; as production and carloadings go down nationally this city is one of the first to tighten its belt. Long before other parts of the country have evidence of returning good times, Cumberland has heard the increasing volume of clicking wheels and tooting whistles and is again hard at work."

The writers sensibly do not try to summon a number of adjectives supposed to define the intrinsic qualities that make Maryland, Maryland.

"Natives rarely try to define the state's individuality," the book states, "outsiders try too hard, and to existing knowledge have not yet succeeded. English? Yes; for its conservatism, stolidity. Southern? Yes; in its frequent lassitude, its willingness to sacrifice prospects of progress to known, safe comforts. Northern? Yes; in its occasional outbursts of efficiency and industry. Maryland is all these and more."

"Albert Cabell Ritchie, four times governor of Maryland, was born in Virginia," the author writes. "But one of the reasons he was governor four times in succession was because he represented—to most Marylanders—all the things they knew and couldn't explain about their state. He defined and expressed, by an inflection of his voice, the essence of the place he had made his home, when he ended many of his public addresses with the words, 'Maryland, My Maryland.'"

While Cumberlanders may feel the local situation might have been covered a bit more fully in the book, most of them will probably agree that the corps of writers has packed much valuable information into the work.

The volume has been published by the Oxford University Press.

Matter Will Be Held Open until Board of Directors Meet

Hetzel, president explained that the Board of Directors, is empowered to adopt the "Four Year Plan" as a project, but mutually agreed to present it to the membership before formal action. The board desires an expression of opinion by the membership, the president said. He asked for individual ideas regarding the proposal, and whether the association should endeavor to obtain its adoption.

Proposal Explained

The "Four Year Plan", it was outlined, is a proposal to petition for an act of legislature to amend the city code of Cumberland, so the term of office served by city officials shall be four years instead of two. This would eliminate an election each second year and the money saved would be used to increase salaries of the mayor and councilmen.

Members of the association discussed various phases of the question and all but three of those present voted to favor the plan as an improvement over the present system and as a favorable project for the Association.

Nine of those present expressed the opinion they would favor a project for city management in Cumberland and five of these nine favored the plan in preference to the proposed "Four Year Plan" if the association should adopt it as project.

All of those present agreed that the proposed "Four Year Plan" is a step in the right direction, and believe it would help improve city government.

Various Plans Favored

There were many things discussed at the meeting besides the question of the "Four Year Plan." There were those who talked about "Home Rule," others who favored city management, and others who advocated only one term of office for city officials.

But after all the discussion, which was informal, due to the absence of a quorum, it was evident the majority would support the plan as a project, if it is adopted by the board of directors, but many reserve the right to offer some other plan or some other idea, in many cases admitting the likelihood of adoption remote, if not almost impossible for a long time to come.

The president stated the matter would be held open until the next meeting of the board of directors.

Lewis M. Wilson Is Elected Chairman Of G.O.P. State Central Committee

NEW GOP CHAIRMAN—Lewis M. Wilson, prominent Cumberland lawyer and former city attorney, last night was elected chairman of the Republican State Central committee of Allegany county to succeed Col. George Henderson. "I will accept," Wilson said immediately when informed of his election, added "I'm looking forward to a big Willkie victory in Allegany county and the nation this fall."

Local Attorney Unanimously Chosen To Succeed Col. Henderson

Lewis M. Wilson, of 819 Mount Royal avenue, former city attorney, last night was elected chairman of the Republican State Central committee of Allegany county by unanimous vote at a meeting of the seven-member group in the Gunter hotel, in Frostburg.

Mr. Wilson, a native of Eckhart, this county, was named to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Col. George Henderson, who deemed it best to step down at this time because he shortly will be called into active service at the National Guard training camp at Rensaalaer Falls, New York, and found it impossible to devote his attention to the committee work. Col. Henderson had been chairman of the committee since September, 1938.

Predicts Willkie Victory

The new chairman was elated when informed of his appointment and declared that he will accept the honor. He added that he "was looking forward to a big Willkie victory in Allegany county and the nation this fall."

A member of the Allegany county bar since 1922, Wilson received his education at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., and his law degree at the University of Maryland, College Park. He filled the unexpired term of John G. Shearer as commissioner of finance and revenue for the City of Cumberland when the latter was appointed to the board of Allegany county commissioners during George Henderson's term as mayor and was city attorney in 1934 and 1935 under the administration of Mayor George W. Legge.

Mr. Wilson was exalted ruler of Cumberland Lodge No. 63 when the B. P. O. Elks home was built on South Centre street. He is a member of the reception committee for the Maryland Department American Legion convention which will be held here August 21 to 24.

All Members Attend

Members of the state central committee attending last night's session were James Park, of Lonaconing, sercetary-treasurer; Miss Grace Shaffer, Herbert H. Griffith and Thomas Elias, of Frostburg; J. Charles Carter, of Eckhart, and Edgar M. Lewis and Nelson W. Russlyer, of Cumberland.

A committee from the Frostburg Young Men's Republican club consisting of Robert Geary, Donald Jeffries, Harry Eisel and John Grim, told the county Republican group that it plans a house-to-house canvass in the Frostburg area in an effort to have all Republicans registered on the county books for the fall election. The young organization was assured the full support of the G. O. P. committee.

Gateway Chatter

by News Staff Members

There seems to be something fascinating about watching men work, particularly construction crews and street workers.

This was attested yesterday when dozens of persons gathered along the sidewalks to watch Cumberland Contracting Company workmen resurface Baltimore street.

The workmen did a good job and in fast time, completing the entire project, from the B. & O. crossing to the Western Maryland crossing in 16 hours and the street was thrown open to traffic at 7 p. m.

Spectators also can be seen each day seeking vantage points to watch progress on the Montgomery Ward building at the corner of Baltimore and George streets. Many cannot let a day pass without stopping by to see how the job is getting along.

In large cities when a new building is under construction crowds of several hundred persons constantly watch the workmen. In Charleston, W. Va., several years ago one fellow passed out printed cards to the watchers certifying them as "sidewalk foremen" and has this act was given wide publicity in Charleston papers.

Gateway Chatter hasn't heard of any Cumberland barbers who attended, but the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing, in America (what won't they think of next?) held a contest at the World's fair in New York last week with $4,000 prizes going to successful quartets.

The July issue of the Baltimore and Ohio Magazine, which has just reached the editorial desk, carries two articles in which Cumberland folks will be interested. The first is entitled "B. & O. Water Supply at Cumberland."

The article says in part "One of the sources from which our trains are watered is located in the Allegany mountains nine miles from Cumberland and the two large dams constructed in recent years serve the City of Cumberland, as well as its many industries."

Three pictures were run with the article, one of Lake Koon, another showing the spillway and control house at at Lake Koon and the third, shows Bill Welsh, car repairer, of Cumberland, filling tanks on a passenger train.

Religious Leaders Study Problems Of Old World

Believe Two Factors May Intervene To Save European Civilization

Two factors may intervene and save British and European civilization according to religious leaders who attended the Harvard Summer School conference on Religious Principles and Contemporary National and International Issues, Rabbi Aaron H. Lefkowitz reported yesterday.

Two Points Stressed

Rabbi Lefkowitz, pastor of Ner Chayim Temple, said representatives at the Cambridge, Mass., conference agreed that what apparently seems inevitable might be avoided if:

2—A demoralized Europe plunged into revolution when Hitler installs a peace econmy.

The conference, called to find a way to mobilize the basic principles of all religious beliefs to preserve the sacredness of human personality, agreed that the United States should lend England every form of material aid with the exception of manpower.

Rabbi Lefkowitz said the conference foresaw that although Hitler may conquer all Europe, it would not necessarily be a lasting subjugation.

Prominent Men Participate

Leaders of the afternoon forum sessions were Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing Protestant religions; Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, rabbi of The Temple, Cleveland, Ohio, representing the Jewish faith; and Dr. Gerald B. Phelan, president of the Institute of Mediaeval Studies, Toronto, Canada, representing the Catholic belief.

Among the evening speakers were Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University; Norman Thomas, Socialist leader; S. K. Ratcliffe, English lecturer and former writer for the Manchester Guardian; Dr. Hjalmar J. Procope, minister of Finland; Harper Sibley, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and Miss Sarah Wambaugh, member of the League of Nation's Saar Plebiscite Commission.

The discussions of the conference were summed up at the final evening session by Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, director of the Harvard University Summer School, who spoke at a Cumberland Community Forum three years ago. Rabbi Lefkowitz will make his notes on the conference the basis of a series of talks later.

Rain Interrupts Resurfacing of Park Street

Work of resurfacing Park street was two-thirds completed yesterday when a heavy downpour of rain shortly after the noon hour caused employees of the Cumberland Contracting company to call a halt until early today when the job will be finished. Starting at Williams street, the workers had advanced past Central avenue when rain put in its appearance. The contract calls for resurfacing Park street from Williams to Union street.

Earl C. Robertson, vice-president of the Cumberland Contracting company, said that the two-day job of resurfacing North Centre street from Baltimore to Smith street will get under way tomorrow. North Mechanic street from Baltimore to Valley street will be improved Friday and Saturday.
